Cuban Plane Lost

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban Airlines plane with 20 persons aboard was reported missing Saturday night on a flight from Miami to Varadero, Cuba.

A search was started after the turbo-jet plane failed to arrive at Varadero at its scheduled time of 5.55 p.m. (EST). There was a possibility that the aircraft, through some mishap, might have been diverted into rebel territory.

It was believed that there were 16 passengers and four crew members aboard the plane.

B.C. Forest Ltd. Acquitted; Mixed Fate for Others

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former British Columbia cabinet minister was convicted of conspiracy and sent to jail Saturday night in a tense courtroom drama that came as a climax to a record 76-day trial.

An Assize Court jury of nine men and three women found former lands and forests minister Robert E. Sommers guilty of conspiracy, along with timber brokerage firm president H. W. Gray, the man from whom he is said to have taken bribes while in office.

The 47-year-old former minister, who still held his post as Social Credit MLA for Rossland-Trail after his resignation from the cabinet in 1956, had a smile on his face as was led away by RCMP. His conviction means automatic loss of his seat in the legislature.

Sommers and Gray were taken to Oakalla Prison Farm, where they will be held until completion of the lengthy and complex trial, when sentence will be passed by the presiding judge, Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson. The accused have been at liberty on bail since the trial began May 1.

The jury had the case for more than 50 hours and reported two more convictions, three disagreements and one acquittal in the case of others of the eight accused. It gave these other verdicts:

Pacific Coast Services Limited, guilty; Evergreen Lumber Sales, guilty; John M. Gray, disagreement; timber engineer Charles D. Schultz, disagreement; C. D. Schultz and Company Ltd., disagreement.

Acquitted was the multi-million-dollar firm of B.C. Forest Products Limited, established here in the 1940s by financier E. P. Taylor of Toronto. The Crown had charged that this firm paid $30,000 to get a B.C. government timber licence.

Air Tense, Court Jammed

The verdicts were given by jury foreman Eric Miller at 7.42 p.m. The atmosphere was tense. Sommers and the other accused sat in the prisoner's box, chins in hand, watching the face of the jury foreman.

The courtroom was jammed. The jury, deliberating in its third day, had asked for a blackboard, chalk and a pointer during the afternoon and later sent word it would have a verdict at 7.30 p.m.

The jurors were sent out late Thursday. They had been deliberating off and on ever since, going to a hotel across the street under guard of sheriff's officers for meals and sleep. They apparently became locked in irreconcilable disagreement over the guilt or innocence of 47-year-old J. M. Gray, 52-year-old Charles D. Schultz and his prominent timber engineering firm of the same name.

Following the verdict, Mr. Justice Wilson told the jury it was discharged with respect to those accused on whose guilt or innocence it could not agree in the conspiracy count. He said these accused would be tried again on that charge on a date to be fixed later.

Legal authorities explained that this announcement was a formality of the court to permit the Crown the right to order a new trial in the disagreement cases if it deems such action warranted.

When a member of the legislature is convicted of a criminal charge his election is deemed invalid and a byelection must be held within six months to fill his seat. Sommers has represented Rossland-Trail riding since 1952 when he first entered the cabinet and has been re-elected with a big majority since the bribery-conspiracy case broke.

The jury still has a big job ahead.

50 More Verdicts Due

Court was adjourned last night until Monday when the jurors will be charged and asked for 50 verdicts on a group of charges against the alleged donors of bribes. After that it will be asked for seven verdicts on charges against Sommers as the alleged recipient of the bribes.

In the donor group, H. W. Gray faces 10 bribery counts, Pacific Coast Services, Charles D. Schultz and the Schultz firm nine each; B.C. Forest Products six, John Gray four and Evergreen Lumber Sales, three.

The Crown charges that the bribes were for use of Sommers' influence in the granting of forest management licences.

In its evidence the crown alleged that more than $16,000 changed hands. Sommers admitted receiving some $7,100 but said in his defence the monies were honest, legitimate loans from his friend Gray, were covered by notes and were repaid.

The conspiracy charge on which the jury reported Saturday charged that between Jan. 1, 1953, and March 31, 1955, the accused conspired with Hector Munro, late president of B.C. Forest, and others "to commit indictable offences."

It charged that Sommers, as an official of the government, unlawfully conspired to "receive, personally, directly or indirectly, gifts, loans or considerations, in money, bonds, travelling expenses and goods" from other defendants and defendant firms, "For assisting or favoring individuals, to wit B.C. Forest Products Ltd., and C. D. Schultz and Company and its clients, in the transaction of business with the government of the said province."

The conspiracy charge continues that the other seven accused conspired "unlawfully to give to the said Robert E. Sommers, being an official of the government as aforesaid, such gifts, loans or considerations, contrary to the form of the statute in such cases made and provided."

Sommers resigned from Premier Bennett's Social Credit cabinet in February, 1956, shortly before a police investigation of the case began.

The defence charged that the case was sparked by persons seeking to discredit Social Credit. It is the longest and most complex trial in the court history of British Columbia, and probably of Canada.

Sommers Verdict

Strachan Won't Comment

Opposition leader Robert Strachan said last night he had "no intention of making political capital" of the Sommers' case, "now that the court has made their decision."

"I prefer to make no comment at this time other than to state I will examine the court's decision in an effort to determine what impact it will have on the forest industry of the province," he said.

"No doubt the whole matter will be examined thoroughly during the next session of the legislature which commences Jan. 2."

The statement was made in a phone call to Victoria from Terrace where Mr. Strachan is attending one of the CCF-labor conferences on the proposed political merger of the party and the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Gaunt, Hungry but Joking

Miracle Mine Spares 7 More

Six More Bodies Out, Total Known Dead, 43

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (AP)—A second miracle came to the shattered Cumberland Coal Mine Saturday. Seven more men were rescued 8½ days after a disastrous upheaval of earth entombed them.

Gaunt, hungry and thirsty, they emerged from their ordeal in astonishingly good condition, as had the 12 miners saved Thursday in the first miracle of the Cumberland.

One even came out joking. Said Maurice Ruddick, 46, and father of 12, when rescue crews reached him in his supposed tomb 13,000 feet from the mine entrance: "Give me a drink of water and I'll sing you a song."

SANG IN DARKNESS

He always sang as he worked and his comrades said he sang plenty during the long hours of darkness, keeping up their spirits.

Yet another, Douglas Jewkes, was jaunty as he was carried to an ambulance past the cheering crowds gathered at the mine head. He sat up, waved, and called out to a friend.

Then, in a bed at the hospital he said: "I feel like a million dollars." Joshed Ruddick from a nearby bed: "So do I, but all of mine is spent."

ONE LEFT DEAD

The seven said they had left one dead in their pocket of refuge and they did not see how anyone else among the miners still missing could be alive. Rescuers agreed.

"But there could be another miracle," said Arnie Patterson, public relations chief of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp.

A total of 100 now have been rescued of the 174 men in the mine when disaster struck Oct. 23—81 of them in the first 24 hours.

IDENTIFICATION MADE

Six more bodies were brought up during the day and identification was made of the dead miner left behind in the latest rescue operation.

That raised the total known dead to 43. Rescue teams still dug through the rubble deep in the mine looking for the other 31 listed as missing. An indefinite number of them are known to be dead. Removal of bodies was suspended for several hours during concentration of all efforts to rescue the latest survivors.

TOLD SAME STORY

The seven told the same story as the 12 except that they had hope revived three days ago when they heard the first, distant noises of the rescue crew. The 12 had given up hope last Monday.

The most badly off was Byron Martin, trapped alone in a pocket only six feet square and 75 feet away from the others. He had neither food nor water throughout his entombment.

"First we heard scratchings and then moans," said miner Vernon Barry of the rescue squad. That was at 4.30 a.m.

DUG A LITTLE MORE

"We dug a little more in the stone. There was scratching again. We hollered and then we thought we heard men. The first voice sounded like Martin's. We broke through, and sure enough it was Martin.

Rescue crews, in a desperate effort, smashed through two rock barricades in 50 minutes and found the other six huddled in a pocket three feet high, five feet wide and 24 feet long.

With Ruddick and Jewkes were Herbert Pepperdine, 36, Garnet Clarke, 29, Currie Smith, 35, and Frank Hunter, 49.

TRIPLE MIRACLE

"It's been a triple miracle," declared Victor Hunter, captain of the rescue crew, when he found his brother Frank among the six.

Another brother, Fred, was among the 12 saved Thursday. A third brother, Percy, was

Socred Convention

Varsity Gets Part Support

By Colonist Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER—Victoria only won partial support for its demand for a degree-granting university at the B.C. Social Credit League convention yesterday. (See other convention story on page 2.)

Instead of supporting Victoria as site for a degree-granting university, the convention went on record as favoring university facilities be extended to British Columbia points, rather than singling out Victoria.

The convention favored the whole of British Columbia even after minister Leslie Peterson pointed out that Victoria already had a university affiliated with UBC which in time, no doubt would handle granting of degrees.

Mr. Peterson explained that in the course of time there will be some degree of decentralization of the University of B.C., but added that he didn't favor the duplication of expensive faculties.

He said Victoria was at present catering to a 50 per cent enrolment of teachers in training.

Peace River delegates questioned why a university should be established in Victoria rather than the B.C. northland, and UBC delegates questioned the advisability of spreading the campus facilities over a greater area than Vancouver district.

Works Minister W. N. Chant said it would be wise to take the educational facilities of B.C. to the people and pointed out that basically Victoria College is a university in its own right under UBC.

UBC delegates to the Socred convention said it was not advisable to rush into another campus, but admitted that at some time in the future it may be necessary.

Leaders Explore Chances

GENEVA (AP) — U.S., British and Soviet delegation leaders explored in a private meeting Saturday the chances of reaching agreement on the policing of a nuclear test ban.

They appeared neither optimistic nor pessimistic after their 45-minute discussion.

Bridge Study Starts Soon

VANCOUVER (CP)—A government-appointed committee to study the need for a new crossing over Vancouver's First Narrows will begin work this week.

Premier Bennett said committee members would be empowered to employ the best traffic expert or experts in North America to conduct the survey.

B.C. Vault Alarm Rings

A short circuit in the burglar alarm system in the provincial vault at the legislative buildings sent police scurrying to the scene shortly before midnight last night.

Police said there was no sign of illegal entry to the buildings.

Most Forecasters Say:

Democrats Will Win

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the fading roar of political cannonading across the continent, Democrats apparently are on the march once more to a solid, precedent-making election victory.

Unless the signs are all wrong—and Republicans hopefully chant they are—Democrats will come out of Tuesday's balloting perhaps with more governors and almost certainly with substantially more strength in Congress.

During the process, Democrats would be inscribing a new chapter in political history books: Dwight D. Eisenhower would become the first president for whom the American people ever have ordered up three congresses of the opposite political faith.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

IT is a comfortable feeling to sit inside and listen to the wind. No doubt people have been enjoying that sensation ever since the first builder sealed the mouth of his cave with a bearskin and a rock.

Psychologists are skeptical about such ideas as "racial memory." Few of them believe that you can draw upon your great-grandfather's memories. They contend that you have to make your own memories.

However, some feelings seem to strike an ancestral echo, as though you remembered them from generations back.

Among these are the sight and sound of running water, either in a stream or a lake. I haven't gone thirsty long enough or often enough to look on water as a comforting sight, and yet I find that being near water is a pleasure.

Personally, I have never been stranded in a desert. I have no conscious memories of an earlier life, in which I was a fish, an otter, or an apeman living at the edge of a primeval swamp.

And yet there seems to be an enjoyment outside the range of my conscious experience, in being near water. I can almost believe that the feeling is compounded from the accumulated thirst of a number of ancestors, who felt secure when they had built their camps near a stream or a lake.

Like Paper Bags in Wind

There is a similar feeling about being enclosed in a room while a storm is raging outside.

I like staring out the window at people, muffled to the ears, who are being blown along like paper bags in the wind.

I have just come in from the wind myself, and warmed up. The room is tolerably draught-proof. The wind is rushing past the eaves with those moans and whistles that bring to mind the sound effects of old melodramas, as they are sometimes lampooned today.

The wind sounds like a caricature of itself. The telephone wires rock insanely up and down. A small tree outside the window bends nearly double.

And the people tack across the wind with gloved hands raised to their hats. They look miserable. As for myself, tucked away behind four walls, I feel smug. Those people are there; I'm here.

In the same spirit, some deplorable ancestor lifted the edge of a sabre-tooth tiger-skin drape, and grinned down from his penthouse in a hollow tree at a fellow-human freezing to death below.

First U.S. Show

Victoria's internationally-known young painter of Canadian wild life, Fenwick Lansdowne, leaves Tuesday for New York and the opening of his first exhibition in the United States. On Nov. 7, a month-long display of 37 paintings of wild birds and flowers will open at the Fifth Ave headquarters of the American Audubon Society.

Sommers Guilty of Conspiracy

The allegations were first brought to light through former Pacific Coast Services bookkeeper Charles H. Eversfield, who took numerous documents from the files of the firm when he left its employ in March, 1955.

Later as the Crown's chief witness, Eversfield testified his only motive in taking the documents was that he "knew what was going on" and wanted documentary proof to tell a "straight story" if ever called upon to do so.

Mrs. Nona Sommers, wife of the former cabinet minister, was at home here when the news came through.

Visitors were apparently at the Sommers' residence at 2 West Obed at the time, as well as the Sommers' two children.

CHARLES EVERSFIELD
. . . he started it all

* * *

Eversfield was on the witness stand for a record 11 days. The battery of six defence lawyers branded him a liar, a blackmailer and a cheat but failed to shake him in his story that Sommers and others were paid off.

BLACKMAIL DENIED

He denied defence accusations he tried to blackmail the Grays for $10,000 or a life partnership in the Pacific firm.

Evidence showed Eversfield first consulted Vancouver lawyer David Sturdy about whether there would be complications in taking the documents from the Pacific files to Los Angeles, where he now runs his own accounting business. He was assured there was not and took the documents south in a trunk.

Later Sturdy contacted him in Los Angeles and put him in touch with former Libral M.L.A. Gordon Gibson who has been a strong critic of government timber licence policy. Gibson was named by the defence as one of those seeking to discredit Social Credit through the prosecution.

MET BONNER

It was after the meeting with Gibson that Eversfield and Sturdy conferred with Attorney-General Bonner in Victoria in December, 1955. The Attorney-General later ordered a police investigation which resulted in the laying of the first indictment in November, 1957.

Early this year there was a preliminary hearing which took more than a month and at which Magistrate Oscar Orr committed the accused for trial. The trial began May 1, but has been subject to numerous adjournments.

The trial has been notable, too, for technical points of law raised. The defence battery used every avenue to meet the case of special prosecutor Victor Dryer, who was appointed by Bonner, to handle the crown's case.

TECHNICAL MOVES

Various technical legal moves have seen the crown's original indictment of a single conspiracy count raised to six charges and then consolidated to five. Later it was split into 17 charges and then to 38 counts. The defence made much of this "juggling" of charges by the crown.

The number of charges were reduced to 25 after Mr. Justice Wilson himself raised the point of whether the old or the new Criminal Code should apply.

He finally ruled that the old code—and not the new one under which the charges had been laid — should prevail because the alleged offence took place before April, 1955, when the new code became effective.

THROWN OUT

A total of 13 charges involving Sommers as a minister of the government—which the old code does not cover — were thrown out as a result of this ruling.

At one point Mr. Justice Wilson, whose judicial candor has been noticeable in the headline-news case, disclosed he had been receiving crank letters accusing him of bias.

This followed one critical ruling in which he discounted five bribery counts against Sommers and a like number against other accused for lack of sufficient evidence. This reduced the Crown's indictment to one count of conspiracy and 19 of bribery.

At the same time the justice denied blanket defence motions for dismissal and for separate trials on some counts.

Anger Intellectuals

Reds Commit Major Blunder

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bitter, soul-searching dispute is reported to be boiling among intellectual leaders in Moscow as a result of the Boris Pasternak affair.

Word to this effect is beginning to come through to Western capitals in the aftermath of Soviet persecution of the famous author.

(See other story—Page 6).

Authorities here said the fragmentary information so far available leaves no doubt that university circles and some of Pasternak's colleagues in the writing profession have been badly shaken by the Communist leadership's attack on him.

EXPERTS' VIEW

The Pasternak case is regarded privately by official experts here as one of the worst blunders which the Soviet leadership has been guilty of in several years.

Although it lacks the scope and tragedy of Russia's handling of the Hungarian anti-Communist revolt two years ago, there is some tendency to compare the two. In this case it is intellectual rather than political freedom which is at issue.

As of now, Washington authorities judge that the whole affair has done severe damage to Soviet prestige throughout the world in addition to angering a large section of the intellegentsia within Russia.

Sommers Controls Emotions

(By Colonist Staff Reporter)

VANCOUVER — Robert Sommers, most-publicized courtroom figure in B.C.'s history, maintained his composure and showed little sign of dismay last night when he was found guilty of conspiracy.

He took the announcement in silence and kept his face from displaying emotion as he was led away from the crowded courtroom by two RCMP officers, to remain in custody until the trial recommences, Monday.

More than 100 persons jammed the courtroom as the former lands and forests minister, dressed in a grey suit and wearing a red tie, stood up to hear the jury's decision.

Like the accused, others in the court heard in silence the long-awaited verdict in the long-drawn-out, oft-delayed trial.

Language is believed to have originated with the Azilian culture of France in 15,000 B.C.

'Promises Promises Promises'

NANAIMO—Progressive Conservative leader for B.C., Deane Finlayson, in a speech here yesterday accused Premier Bennett of making "promises, promises, spectacular grandiose promises."

But the premier's statement that $1,000,000,000 would be spent on highway development in B.C. in the next 10 years "couldn't possibly be carried out," Mr. Finlayson told an annual meeting of the Nanaimo Riding Federal PC Association.

CANNOT SUSTAIN

"The province could not possibly sustain a $100,000,000-a-year highways' program," said the Conservative leader.

He said the government had budgetted for "only $27,000,000" this year for highways.

NAME CANDIDATES

Mr. Finlayson urged local ridings to ready candidates for a provincial election by next June, and said "They must be ready whether an election is called or not."

Officers elected at the meeting were Mrs. Elaine Dobbyn, Duncan, president; Mrs. H. Armishaw, Pitt Clayton and Ken Alexander, vice-presidents; J. Irwin, secretary, and H. Williams, treasurer.

LABOR BLAMED

Referring to Premier Bennett's remarks at the Social Credit rally in Vancouver, Mr. Finlayson said B.C.'s economy has been "strangled" over the past months by labor and "then Mr. Bennett says he won't allow it to happen."

He claimed the present provincial government had no policy whatever for utilization of "our valuable (power) resources."

Paul Cameron Most Popular

VANCOUVER (CP)—Import halfback Paul Cameron was named the B.C. Lions most popular player in a vote of Vancouver fans, it was announced during Saturday night's WIFU game.

Fullback By Bailey was runner-up to Cameron, who has played outstanding football for Lions out of the left halfback slot and also on defence. It was the fourth consecutive year that an import backfielder has won the most popular player award.

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP)—Nanaimo Clippers came from behind Saturday to tie Chilliwack Flamingos 7-7 in the first Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey League game played at the new coliseum here.

'Chicago Gangsters' in Control

Only Reds at Union Rallies Socred Delegate Contends

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Social Credit party wrapped up its annual convention last evening with assertions by individual delegates that only Communists attend labor union meetings, that the provincial government might over-extend its contingent liabilities and that gangsters from Chicago control Canadian labor unions.

The claim that only Communists attend the union meetings was quickly refuted by the convention.

The claim was made by a Victoria delegate to the two-day convention during debate on a resolution suggesting all unions be incorporated under the Provincial Societies Act. The resolution was tabled.

The woman delegate rose during the debate and indicated the Social Credit government shouldn't pay too much attention to the unions because "the only ones who attend the meetings are those who got their education in Russia."

APPLAUSE, CHEERS

George Hahn, former SC MP for New Westminster, said he didn't believe the convention agreed with the "lady from Victoria who said only Communists go to union meetings." The applause and cheers which greeted his statement were, Mr. Hahn said, "The only answer we need."

The woman's statement, however, provided a kind of "capper" typical of B.C. Social Credit conventions.

Last year, in the dying stages of the convention, a northern B.C. delegate delivered a strong anti-Semitic speech. The speech prompted a resolution from the executive this year opposing "racial, class or religious prejudice."

The suggestion that Premier Bennett might over-extend the province's contingent liabilities came from Vancouver delegate William Rose.

Mr. Rose said during a finance debate he "conceded that the government could" increase contingent liabilities "to the point where operations wouldn't pay."

B.C. contingent liabilities include the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, the B.C. Power Commission and the Toll Highways and Bridges Authority. The government has guaranteed about $500,000,000 worth of contingent liabilities, said by the premier to be "self-liquidating."

R. O. Ney, of Oak Bay, a suburb of Victoria, said during labor resolution discussion he would "like to give control of Canadian unions back to the rank and file instead of the gangsters from Chicago."

He said employers in B.C. were able to deal adequately with local union leaders, but "not with the Chicago gangsters."

NOT THE ANSWER

Dan Campbell, MLA for Comox, opposing a resolution asking for labor courts, said he didn't think they were the "end-all for problems in labor relations . . . not the answer in every dispute."

Another MLA, Don Smith from Victoria, said most people at the convention "are not intelligently-enough informed on labor courts to know what they are voting about." The resolution was defeated.

A resolution asking that a royal commission be established to look into all phases of the labor-management situation, was passed by the convention.

The government should "tune up the Workmen's Compensation Board with the utmost haste," a delegate said, because the complaints of injustice from that organization "have been embarrassing the government long enough."

RESIGNATION ASKED

Less than two weeks ago a Federation of Labor meeting in Vancouver called for the resignation of the chairman of the WCB.

Health Minister Eric Martin, answering a resolution, told the convention "It is not in accordance with government principles to license medical doctors."

The resolution in question criticized the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons and said doctors should be free to register with the government and be able to bypass the college.

"In the six years I have been minister I have been given full co-operation by the college . . . and have never known them to make a wrong decision."

Blind Faith in Each Other

Coal Miners Race Apart

By RICHARD J. GWYN

OTTAWA (UPI)—If you or I, city-living types, were caught in a small hole almost one mile underground, in pitch-blackness, without food or water, we probably would go mad.

A miner doesn't.

The job of a coal-miner is dirty, socially menial, and dangerous. Yet they have something sociologists would wish to see in more of us city dwellers: a belief in their fellows.

The faith of a miner in his fellow-miners is almost mystical. The bond can be seen and felt. It drives those above ground to superhuman efforts to reach and free those trapped below.

The unwritten, never-broken, code of miners is that while there is hope, any hope, rescue operations continue. Twice mine officials had given up hope. Twice groups of men were freed from the depths of the shattered mine.

SIT AND WAIT

This is what gives the trapped miner the courage to sit and wait.

In the November, 1956, disaster, when the first of the rescued men were being brought to the surface, press photographers were given strict orders not to use flash bulbs for fear of hurting the miners' eyes. One photographer used his flash. Instantly he was set on by three miners, thrown to the ground, and his camera was smashed. If those miners had not been so eager to see who was coming up that photographer would have ended up in hospital.

A man underground, without food and water, is given by doctors 10 days to live. Water is the essential. With it a man can survive longer without food, living off his body-fat.

But in the mine-depths there are many other dangers to bring a man to breaking-point.

There is the pitch-blackness. There is the smell of coal gas. There is the cramped conditions, not enough to walk or even stand up straight. There is the hopelessness of rescue.

But yet the miner can survive. He sits, sings hymns, and waits.

It would be the waiting that would be the hardest for any city dweller, doctors say. But the miners don't look at it that way. They know that somewhere, half a mile or 100 feet away, rescue men, led by draegermen, are working feverishly, pushing aside rock and rubble, shoring up the roof, hacking away obstacles, to push a path to the sunlight.

The Springhill miners are a religious people. But not especially so. The union hall, rather than the church halls, is their social centre. There they gather for cribbage, for movies, for talk, while their wives meet at the ladies' auxiliary.

The proudest moment for a miner's son comes when he can go to his school teacher and say, "I am 15; I can go down the mine."

Unlike many other maritime communities, the mining towns keep many of their young people, both boys and girls. From father to son the tradition is handed down.

The stories of what miners will do to reach their trapped fellows are legion. Here are three from the November, 1956, disaster which took 39 lives:

—The draegermen carry special equipment, gas masks and oxygen, to work in the gas-filled, explosion-shattered tunnels. Mine officials casually watching the pithead caught one bare-faced miner trying to slip among a team of draegermen. He would have died instantly.

—One draegerman had his face blasted by fire. He was brought to the surface and rushed to an ambulance unconscious. Coming to just before the ambulance doors were closed, he struggled up. "My God, where are you taking me? I must go back." He died on the way to hospital.

UTTERLY EXHAUSTED

—A rescue team's shift is four hours. A man emerges utterly exhausted. Mine officials, again watching the pithead, saw one man just coming out try to slip into the ranks of a team going in. "You can't do two shifts." The miner walked away, tears in his eyes. Only later did officials learn he had already worked two straight shifts. He was trying to make it three in a row.

Anyone who has lived in a coal-mining town will tell. The miners believe in one another. They are brothers in danger. A psychologist might even call it love.

'Triple Miracle'

Official Toll Reaches 36

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) — The official death toll in the Springhill mine disaster rose to 36 yesterday.

Thirty-eight men were still listed as missing but it is known some of them are dead. Removal of bodies was suspended for several hours while all efforts were directed at rescuing the latest survivors.

Disaster Profiteers

TORONTO (UPI) — The Springhill disaster fund warned Ontario residents last night to be on guard from what it called "spurious attempts to capitalize on the Springhill disaster for personal profit." D. J. McGarry, committee chairman of the fund, said he had heard of plans to promote a "Springhill Rock" benefit youth dance in which 10 per cent would be retained for the administration. He said such functions are not in good taste.

"I've seen a triple miracle. My three brothers are all safe now." The speaker: Victor Hunter, rescue captain of men searching for miners trapped in the Cumberland mine's wrecked tunnels.

* * *

The six Henwood brothers gave up coal mining some time ago. But their father continued to earn his living in the pits.

Today they are standing by for word of their father, Harland Henwood, 53, listed as missing.

* * *

Some quotes from survivors:

Miner Byron Martin: "God must have saved this little hole for me."

Douglas Jewkes, 37, whose first thoughts after being rescued were of ice cream and pop: "I will sweep streets before going back to coal mining."

Mrs. Barney Martin, whose 42-year-old miner husband was the first of seven men brought out alive after nearly nine days: "I feel just so happy I couldn't feel any better." Barney was all alone in a tiny prison of rock and debris when bare-faced miners first heard his tapping.

Courage

SPRINGHILL, N.S. (CP) —Maurice Ruddick, one of seven men found alive yesterday after 8½ days in the ruins of Cumberland coal mine, is the father of 12 children.

The 46-year-old miner had a broken leg when rescue workers reached him but his incredible courage had not deserted him.

"Give me a drink of water and I'll sing you a song," he told his rescuers.

His children range in age from two weeks to 12 years and four of them are in hospital with pneumonia.

Edinburgh Cheers Diefenbaker Visit

EDINBURGH (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker turned tourist yesterday to visit the sights here, but reminders of Canada kept cropping up throughout his whirlwind three-hour sight-seeing travels.

The prime minister's spirits were obviously lifted when news was relayed to him that another seven coal miners had been rescued nine days after the Springhill mine disaster.

"I am deeply pleased," he said. "The courage of the men paid off."

There were handclaps, waves and calls of greetings from pedestrians as he went to Edinburgh's key tourist attractions —Edinburgh Castle with its impressive national war memorial, St. Giles Cathedral and Holyroodhouse, the royal residence. There were even a few small Red Ensigns waved along the route.

The Diefenbakers left by air in the afternoon for Inverness, where they will spend the night before proceeding to Kildonan, the tiny village from which the prime minister's great-grandfather, George Bannerman went to Manitoba's Red River settlement with the Selkirk settlers in 1813-14.

The prime ministers' purpose in making the trip was to attempt to trace his family roots in the Sutherland area.

Gaunt, Hungry but Joking Seven More Miners Spared brought out the night of the disaster.

The men were found nearly a mile below ground, about 300 feet from where the other 12 were located. They also told of the sudden bump and the crash of rock and coal and the dust in the clogged tunnels.

ATE COAL, BARK

Their meager supply of food and water was exhausted Monday. They ate coal and bark from the shattered mine timbers around them. Their miners' lamps went out after a few days.

As the senior among the six, Ruddick acted as their leader. He led them in songs. And they prayed. They were confident they would be saved.

The first thing the doctors gave the seven was a little water, then hot coffee.

QUART WHISKY

At the hospital, Pepperdine told his wife: "Give me a quart of whisky, will you?"

Clarke told mine spokesman Patterson he observed his 29th birthday Monday with one stale sandwich he had brought into the pits with him.

"They cut up the sandwich, imagining it was a birthday cake," Patterson said. "Then they sang 'Happy Birthday, Dear Garnet' and some hymns. Then they prayed awhile."

DISTANT DIGGING

A seventh man with the six died the next day, just a day before renewed hope came to the men at the sound of distant digging. His body was brought to the surface after the other six were rescued.

Word that more survivors had been found spread—by word of mouth, neighbors knocking on windows and shouting.

SHAKING HEADS

Soon cars were speeding down streets of this mining town of 7,000 to the pithead. The reaction of many seemed to be one of disbelief. They sat around for the most part saying little and shaking their heads.

They found it hard to accept two miracles in three days.

WHAT DOCTORS SAY ABOUT:

Better Health Through Knowledge

● Cancer

Q. Can cancer be cured with drugs?

A. Some types of cancer can be treated with chemicals. Other types require the use of radium, surgery, X-ray, and radioactive substances. These are accepted treatment methods. Watch out for "sure cures" for cancer offered under fancy names and at fancy prices. One fellow who called himself "doctor" (he had a high school diploma from a correspondence school) charged $400 for his "cure" which consisted of a "tonic" and some vitamin pills. The quack had a "clinic" — and a million dollar racket. It's big business. When you need medical advice, start with your family physician.

● "Listening" During Sleep

Q. Can you listen for certain sounds during sleep?

A. Yes. A mother can sleep soundly while trucks or trains rumble past her window but will awaken promptly at the slightest whimper of her sick child. Doctors at Walter Reed Army Institute of Research conducted an interesting experiment along these lines. They trained cats to "listen" for clicking sounds. The doctors then recorded the brain wave pattern of trained and untrained animals. Clicks made no impression on the untrained cats. In the conditioned or trained animals, every click showed up in the brain wave pattern. There must be some sort of nervous mechanism that lets some sounds through but blocks others.

Material in MEDICAL MIRROR is based on various scientific publications and does not necessarily reflect the opinion of all doctors. The diagnosis and treatment of disease requires the skill and knowledge which only a physician can apply by personally attending the patient.

Pedestrian Malls

IF Victoria ever goes in for pedestrian malls in the heart of the city, as was proposed in the Faustman report some time ago and mentioned by other traffic experts since, it will not be breaking new ground. Proponents of the mall idea may be interested and encouraged to know that Boston, Massachusetts, now has one, and expects soon to have several.

Recently officials tied a symbolic ribbon across one of Boston's principal downtown streets to convert it into a shopping mall reserved for people travelling on foot. Far from resisting this exclusion of all vehicles, merchants along the street co-operated by hauling out potted trees, shrubs and flowering plants and festooned their buildings with other decorations to give the street a festive air. It was regarded as a notable victory for the pedestrian over his adversary the automobile, and during the inaugurating ceremony the remark was made by a civic official that "the automobile has literally worn out its welcome in the congested centres of big cities."

Boston's first mall is an experiment, and if it proves successful the intention is to extend the prohibition of all wheeled traffic to other streets in the heart of the city. This is a significant trend in the thinking of city planners, caused by the saturation of city streets with traffic which can barely move because of its own density. The mall plan is regarded by its proponents as particularly applicable to older cities with narrow streets which cannot be widened to accommodate today's pressure of automobile traffic.

The pedestrian mall is, of course, a novelty only in North America, but on this continent reverence for the automobile has begun to yield to the dictates of necessity.

Unsure and Afraid

THE compulsion forced on Soviet writer Boris Pasternak to refuse the Nobel Prize for literature, after he had accepted it with gratitude, is fresh evidence of the domestic unsureness of the Communist regime. For all of its external military might and its 40 years' tenure of power it fears criticism at home. It dare not let even its best writers reflect unfavorably on Soviet life.

Any free country is glad when one of its citizens wins a Nobel prize, absorbing some of the honor to itself. In free countries also books without number are printed which condemn or criticize both the ruling authorities and specific aspects of society. Mature nations take such things in their stride, or use them to better the conditions complained of. In spite of its physical growth and amazing industrial development, therefore, Soviet Russia is unsure, timid and afraid of its own people. It is this inability to accept home truths which in the end will probably prove to be the undoing of the Communist philosophy. Individual minds cannot be kept in restraint forever.

An anomalous aspect of the forced rejection of the literature prize is that three other Russians have been awarded the Nobel physics prize. Here acceptance is eager and the Soviet state is glad of the honor. Presumably scientific achievements are matters of fact and not of opinion and therefore cannot be assessed on ideological lines.

Russia will not care what the rest of the world thinks of its pressure on Mr. Pasternak, but obviously the Soviet regime cares terribly lest his writings reach Russian hands. His book has been published outside Russia but it will not be available to the fellows of the man who wrote it. The warts of Communist society must be hidden at all costs from the Russian people. Herein quite patently lies the great weakness of the present Soviet regime.

Dangerous Practices

THE fortunate intervention of the police in the pre-Halloween period and during the celebration undoubtedly saved several youths from the consequence of their own folly. There can be no doubt that had the Halloween "bombs" made from abandoned dynamite and caps, fused with inch-long strips for ignition, been used they would have blown off the hands of whoever wielded them, if indeed the damage had stopped there. To the warning given to them later in a juvenile court there can be at least the useful reflection for them that they are all in one piece, and might very easily have been otherwise had their Halloween plans carried out.

Another instance of the sort just as far reaching in its possible consequences was the tracing of homemade "pistols," contrived by using a rifle cartridge case mounted on a short piece of wood as a barrel, a firecracker as the charge, and a small pebble as the pellet. These devices were in use on a downtown street in one instance on Halloween, and they threw their pebbles with almost the force of a .22 rifle bullet. There is such a thing as carrying even ingenuity to extremes. The homemade "pistols" constitute a firearm in the eyes of the law, and their users could be prosecuted. Once again the difference between lifelong damage and a happy Halloween came to rest in the unpredictable element of luck.

With such unbalanced exceptions, Halloween came and went much as it has always done. Community bonfires gave enjoyment to many youngsters in the right tradition of the day. Countless youths stayed within the limits of what is permissible and harmless; while a vigilant police drive tempered damage that might have resulted but for that forethought.

Island Editors Say

Whipping the Wrong Boy

The Workmen's Compensation Act leaves much to be desired, it is true. But to blame the shortcomings of such legislation on those charged with administering the act is folly.

The present board has stated that they would welcome an inquiry into the workings of their department. We are confident such an investigation would simply point up the fact that the act is sadly outmoded.

Rather than waste their time with undue criticism of the three very able commissioners, labor and politicians would do well to direct their outbursts against the proper authorities, namely the government members who, session after session, vote down the amendments aimed at rectifying the situation.

—COURTENAY ARGUS

Oak Bay Breakwater

If the Turkey Head - Mary Todd Island breakwater is included in the 1959 public works budget, it will be the culmination of efforts dating back, some say, since the municipality of Oak Bay was formed.

There is one great flaw in the scheme as we see it. According to the federal government sketch, the top of the breakwater would be only 15 feet wide. The question arises: where are all the cars going to park? Presumably the Turkey Head promontory itself would accommodate many of them, but nothing like the numbers of cars which will need accommodation. It is to be trusted that our council have this parking need in mind.

—OAK BAY LEADER

School of Aviation

Establishment of a vocational training school in aviation at Patricia Bay has been advocated by provincial public works minister, W. N. Chant. Such a school would be operated on a joint basis by the provincial and federal governments.

The aviation industry through both the manufacturing associations and the operating organizations has long been pressing the government for the establishment of some form of training unit. By this means staff would be readily available to the industry. The training is extensive and the standards are high in aircraft maintenance. A school is an essential if these standards are to be kept.

The Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce could well take action on the matter and press for the establishment of the school now and here.

—SIDNEY REVIEW

'Lift' for Cowichan Copper

In these days of lower world commodity prices, especially base metals, the Cowichan Copper Company has surprised the mining fraternity with its achievements. Construction of a $250,000 dock at Hatch Point, Cobble Hill, is not the least among them.

The company now hopes through its unexpected windfall of a sudden price rise, even while the vessel carrying the ore was steaming across the Pacific to Japan, to be in a position to discharge a great portion of its financial obligations. The shipment may have a value exceeding $1,000,000.

After over 50 years it is surely a cause for gratification once again to see copper ore from the Cowichan area making its way to the markets of the world. The former Tyee company on Mount Sicker was one of world's biggest producers shortly after the turn of the century.

Burning Issues

In the Albernis we have fought over amalgamation, building of new city hall, expenditure for hard surfacing, the rights of dogs to run at large, mail delivery and many other diversified subjects.

Many burning issues have long since been forgotten and the rancor they caused has evaporated long since. Now, in the midst of several similar disputes we look with pride on this local characteristic. It is a healthy situation when there is interest rather than apathy in the affairs of the municipality. May burning issues continue to burn in the Albernis.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

ANOTHER group of European immigrants have become Canadians and adjured in the process to drop their loyalties to the lands they came from.

This is good and necessary advice, I daresay; henceforth Canada has first claim on their patriotism.

The process of adoption must be gradual, however. Newcomers from Europe, if they are beyond schoolboy age when they come here, cannot slough off their heritage as though it were an old shoe. Nor should they.

If anyone isn't proud of the country of his birth, and thus able to somersault his mind overnight, he is not likely to be the kind of person in which his new country may take pride. A new Canadian may gratefully accept citizenship here but it is against human instinct to turn one's back on one's native heath.

Part of his original home land will remain with him for ever.

This is quite normal and indeed can be helpful to the land of his adoption. Newcomers may and do add to the cultures of Canada. As is manifest in Victoria, also, they may bring new skills, fresh endeavors, individual enterprise and ideas that enrich a community.

While applying these the assumption of a Canadian outlook is perforce a matter of time. The mental transfer, also, is tied of necessity to the acquisition of the English language. Not until they think in English will they begin really to feel at home.

For newcomers from Britain the adjustment is much easier. Some of these wrongfully think they have arrived in what is merely an extension of Britain, of course, and have to learn differently.

* * *

But in any case the British immigrant belongs to the same totem as do Canadians. Language, laws, political system and the basic ethos of society are similar, in concept if not precisely in every operative degree.

In assuming his new loyalty, however, he won't throw overboard his former leal any faster than the newcomer from Europe. Probably not as quickly, in fact — because he doesn't have to undergo such drastic change of mind—and perhaps never so completely.

He remains a British subject and thus part of his heritage is still valid.

It is a mistake to assume, however, as some native-born Canadians are apt to do, that because a Canadian by adoption hugs some fondness for his native heath always to his heart he is thereby letting Canada down.

Probably no one who has not been an immigrant can fully understand the duality of sentiment that can encompass a person and yet not infringe on his allegiance to Canada. I have heard more expressions of pride and love of Canada from the lips of individuals who have elected to make this country their home than from persons who were born in Canada.

Canadians by adoption may retain links with their motherlands through societies, celebrations and events recalling their antecedents but Canada need never fear for their wholehearted support. One need only note their instant reaction to any stranger's remark that belittles this country to appreciate their loyalty to Canada.

The new Canadians of last week will come to that stage, without a doubt. They cannot be expected to reach it tomorrow, or in fact without mental wrench. They are not chameleons but human beings in whom ties of birth will linger on.

Letter from London

Linking the Commonwealth by Phone

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

TWO years ago I had the modest distinction of making the first telephone call ever made between the United Kingdom and British Columbia by submarine cable. In the few minutes I was talking to the Colonist it was not difficult to appreciate that a new era in communications was opening up.

The conversation was as clear as many local telephone calls and a great deal clearer than many ordinary long-distance calls.

The other day I called in to find out what the public reaction had been to the service, which has now been operating for 25 months. The most important reaction probably is the decision in principle to establish a Commonwealth-wide telephone cable service. That is a direct result of the success of the Canadian service. The cable will be extended from Vancouver Island to Fiji, New Zealand and Australia, with the possibility of some island extensions. After that it will go from Australia to Malaya, India, Ceylon and South Africa and from South Africa back to Britain.

Some of us remember the wonder and enthusiasm with which we tackled the first radio telephone conversations. Sometimes they were good; at other times they were frustrating in the extreme. Sometimes circuits were so bad that communications had to be suspended for hours and sometimes days. Today it is usually possible to pick up your receiver and be connected to a Canadian number within a few minutes. The record I understand is for a subscriber to be talking to a Canadian subscriber within 90 seconds of asking for the call. Normally it takes only a few minutes, with occasional peak delays of up to half an hour.

When the service opened the financial experts said that it would have to earn more than $11,000 a day if it was to be an economic proposition. And economic proposition means the payment of all operating expenses and capital interest and depreciation. To earn this revenue the circuits would have to be fully occupied for three hours a day. It was hoped that the telephone cable would be paying its way within five years and earning money within ten years. The life of the cable was estimated at 20 years.

In fact the service was in a position to pay dividends in its first year of operation. At the moment an average of 30,000 calls are being made each month—and very few of them are of three-minutes' duration. Some of them are conference calls lasting for half an hour or more. At peak periods the business offering is already too much for the cable despite a piece of engineering wizardry which has turned a cable designed for 27 circuits into one capable of carrying 40 circuits. The channels to Canada have been doubled—from six to 12—and the United States they have been increased from 21 to 27.

* * *

The thousand calls a day are nearly double the estimated number of calls after two years of operation. They represent a three-fold increase on the number of telephone conversations on the radio telephone—and are still going up. The revenue is such that there is every chance that the capital cost will have been paid off out of earnings by the time the second cable, now being made for the Anglo-Canadian service, is ready for laying in 1961. Even the hardest headed government accountant is convinced of the worth of telephone cables as an investment.

The new Commonwealth network —which will start with a link from Vancouver Island to New Zealand— will cost in all about $200,000,000 and involve about 30,000 miles of cable. The volume of traffic will be less than on the Atlantic cable but the post office, responsible for operations at this end, realizes that so far they have only touched the fringe of social traffic available. Calls which cost from $12 to $15 for a three-minutes' conversation are a luxury for the ordinary citizen, so the next stage is likely to be a substantial reduction in charges for off-peak traffic to allow for much greater use of the cable socially.

* * *

There are difficulties in the way, of course, because of the varying time zones. Off-peak traffic in one part of the world will coincide with peak traffic in another part. As an example the only really "off peak" time in both the United Kingdom and British Columbia would start at about 2 a.m. B.C. time, which would be equivalent to 5 p.m. in Britain.

The ultimate solution will be the provision of extra facilities in the most congested sections—such as the Atlantic—and a telescoping of times to allow for at least a short period of mutually reasonable times for social calls.

And the cost? The decision will be an international one but on present indications a social call should be an economic proposition for about a dollar a minute; but even that figure has its complications because it would create local anomalies. It could mean, for example, that a B.C. resident could call London more cheaply than many parts of Canada.

It is expected, however, that telephone calls will be one of the commodities likely to go down in price all over the world as the result of ever-increasing automation. In December Britain starts on a system which abolishes the three-minute long-long-distance call and substitutes a charge equivalent to 3c for 12 seconds over the maximum distance, which in these islands involves a circuit distance of more than a thousand miles. Even a three-minute call at that rate shows a cut of 33⅓% on existing charges.

THE Tolmie government fell and the Liberals under T. Dufferin Pattullo swept in with a large majority in the B.C. election 25 years ago.

Said Mr. Pattullo: "The people have spoken . . . I am deeply grateful for the confidence expressed."

Hitler broke his silver presentation hammer while laying the foundation stone of the new German House of Art in Munich. The unlucky accident caused dismay among some of the onlookers.

Halloween pranksters in rural Ontario who were pelting farm homes with apples and rocks were answered with gunfire from two irate farmers. Five of the "youngsters"—ages ranging from 15 to 31—were wounded.

Halloween fun in Victoria included a "Banshee Ball" at the Palais de Danse, children's fancy dress parties put on by the WI's of Lake Hill and Brentwood, and Master Francis Ernest Robinson's party.

DARKNESS fell on a parade through New York that had started at 10 in the morning, 50 years ago. Sixty thousand men passed in review before the grandstand in honor of presidential candidate William Howard Taft.

The report did not mention whether Mr. Taft stood at salute for the whole seven hours.

Suffragettes watching the parade from an upper window loosed a flock of yellow balloons labelled "Votes for Women," and a woman shouted through a megaphone: "You vote for us, and we'll vote for Taft." Marchers demanded that the police arrest the women, but they declined to act.

"Mr. Bryan," said Taft in a speech, "has shown a capacity for not recognizing a sound business principle when he meets it in the street."

Americans had their feelings hurt in the Far East. Pekin newspapers and officials failed to take any notice of the visit of the second squadron of the U.S. Navy to Amoy.

PROSPECTORS were ranging the country between Goldstream and Cowichan 95 years ago. Many long quartz reefs were discovered and traces of both gold and silver.

A violent night of gale and storm forced several parties of prospectors to abandon their tents and flee to bare mountain slopes. The wind flung full-grown trees over with a noise like thunder, terrifying the men camped in the intense darkness of the forest.

Shareholders in the Gold Harbor Company were pleased to learn that a quartz sample from the company's Queen Charlotte Islands mine had assayed at $450 to the ton.

The Union Hook and Ladder Company of Victoria held their annual meeting and re-elected William H. Thain as foreman, Frank Perrett, first assistant, C. W. Wallace, treasurer, and William Hanson, secretary. "A handsome collation" was served at the close of the meeting.

The Packsack

of GREGORY CLARK

IN a bookstore yesterday I was deeply shocked to discover a book done up in cellophane. There it was, as snugly confined in the tight glassy covering as a packet of cigarettes.

It was a book about golf, according to the title.

Wondering if this presaged a new era in book publishing, in which browsing through books would no longer be possible, I asked a clerk about it.

"Oh, no," she said. "We did that one up in cellophane. There's an old gentleman came in every day and spent half an hour reading that one book. He was begining to get it soiled and shopworn. We asked him a dozen times if he wanted to buy it. But he didn't. So we just locked it up in cellophane."

"Now isn't that mean!" I protested.

She beckoned me over to another book shelf. Here were half a dozen copies of a new and highly pornographic book that has received wide publicity in the newspapers and magazines. They were all done up in cellophane too.

"We did these up," said the clerk, "because so many creepy types—you know, those nice, nice people who wouldn't be found dead buying the book—came in, perhaps three or four times, and flipped hastily through the pages looking for the dirty bits."

"Now isn't that mean!" I repeated.

Letters to the Editor

'Phoney Garbage'

In the Colonist of Wednesday, Oct. 29, I note that a Mr. Harry Kendall of Port Alberni read or made a statement before council implying that a "splinter" group of the American Medical Association had condemned fluoridation.

This is entirely false. I have a copy of the resolution in question and the word fluoridation is not even mentioned! I also have a copy of a letter from their secretary stating that the association has never taken any stand against fluoridation, although they were pressed to do so.

Mr. Kendall should check his information sources and stop believing and giving publicity to the phoney garbage that reaches him from the B.C. "Pure Water" Association. I get it too and it stinks!

The American Association of Physicians and Surgeons is allegedly 15,000 strong. On the other hand the American Medical Association is for fluoridation and it has over 200,000 members.

Apparently Mr. Kendall was associated with Ald. Hamilton in the incorrect statement to council. I think that both gentlemen should make an apology. Neither Mr. Hamilton nor Mr. Kendall has the slightest qualification to speak on dental health matters.

Island Mine Disaster

I am much surprised, neither of the local papers mentioned the coal mine explosion at Extension, 12 miles north of Ladysmith. There were 33 men lost in that disaster. I know what it meant to have word brought me that it was thought some had escaped in another direction. This occurred Oct. 9, 1909.

North American Make-up:

'Squander, Move'

By KENNETH WOOD
In a BBC talk on architecture of B.C.

. . . Vancouver, like so many cities of the American continent, is tyrannized by the automobile, with motels, drive-in banks, cinemas, restaurants, and service stores. One walks from necessity and not from choice; the pedestrian gets short shrift, public transport is minimal and the bicycle hardly exists.

The rigidly planned grid-iron of roads scarcely relates to the modern planning concepts of separation of vehicle and pedestrian, and traffic is swiftly clogging the arteries of the cities and residential areas, with all the deplorable effects from which our own big towns are now suffering.

Despite one or two more ambitious schemes, town planning remains embryonic and most development appears to be planned only for the immediate future.

There is still a strong element of the old pioneering spirit of "squander and move" in the North American make-up, and this together with a swiftly rising standard of living which treats homes, towns, and land alike as expendable products, creates an insatiable demand for new houses.

Both the estates of the speculative "rush" builders and the architectural one-offs are unable to keep pace with the demand, and with high labor costs the solution for many is the self-built house.

This is often imaginatively designed by a student architect, and erected with only the help of the occasional wireman or other specialist tradesman.

It is made easier by the almost universal use of pre-surfaced timber; that is timber which has been planed at the mill and then is delivered to the site dead to size.

This is easier and safer to handle than the rough-sawn carcassing timber to which we are accustomed in this country. It also permits an accuracy of site carpentry and a speed of erection.

A house of 1,500 square feet can be completed in six to eight weeks with the general site use of electric power tools.

This is closely tied to B.C. economics of house construction, where the high labor rates and relatively low cost and abundance of the material set the pattern of building.

This pressure of new housing and the demand of each to his own lot leads to widespread land speculation, forcing up the costs of plots, while the rash of commuter-owned bungalows races up the hillsides, and bulldozers strip whole areas and topple the giant firs with sickening speed.

Meanwhile, the inner residential areas continue to slip downhill, and the once elegant and elaborately finished three or four-storey timber apartments become dingy rooming houses. . . .

We Live in an Age Without Heroes

By ARTHUR M. SCHLESINGER, JR.
(Saturday Evening Post)

Ours is an age without heroes — and, when we say this, we suddenly realize how spectacularly the world has changed in a generation.

Most of us grew up in a time of lowering personalities. For better or for worse, great men seemed to dominate our lives and shape our destiny.

In the United States we had Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt. In Great Britain, there were Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. In other lands, there were Lenin, Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini, Clemenceau, Gandhi, Kemal, Sun Yat-sen. Outside of politics there were Einstein, Freud, Keynes.

* * *

Some of these great men influenced the world for good, others for evil; but, whether for good or for evil, the fact that each had not died at birth made a difference, one believed, to everyone who lived after them.

Today no one bestrides our narrow world like a colossus; we have no giants . . . There are a few figures on the margin of uniqueness, perhaps: Adenauer, Nehru, Tito, De Gaulle, Chiang Kai-shek, Mao Tse-tung. But there seem to be none in the epic style of those mighty figures of our recent past who seized history with both hands and gave it an imprint, even a direction, which it otherwise might not have had.

* * *

Our own President, with all his pleasant qualities, has more or less explicitly renounced any desire to impress his own views on history. The Macmillans, Khrushchevs and Gronchis have measurably less specific gravity than their predecessors.

Why have giants vanished from our midst?

Why should our age not only be without great men but even seem actively hostile to them? Surely one reason we have so few heroes now is precisely that we had so many a generation ago. Greatness is hard for common humanity to bear.

A world of heroes keeps people from living their own private lives.

Moreover, great men live dangerously. They introduce extremes into existence—extremes of good, extremes of evil—and ordinary men after a time flinch from the ultimates and yearn for undemanding security.

The Second World War was the climax of an epoch of living dangerously. It is no surprise that it precipitated a universal revulsion against greatness. The war itself destroyed Hitler and Mussolini. And the architects of victory were hardly longer-lived.

After the war, the British repudiated Churchill, and the Americans (with the adoption of the 22nd Amendment) Roosevelt. In due course, the French repudiated De Gaulle (they later repented, but it took the threat of civil war to bring him back); the Chinese, Chiang Kai-shek; and the Russians, Stalin.

* * *

Khrushchev, in toppling Stalin from his pedestal, pronounced the general verdict against the uncommon man: the modern world, he said, had no use for the "cult of the individual."

No man is infallible, and every man needs to be reminded of this on occasion. Still, our age has gone further than this—it objects not just to hero worship but to heroes. The century of the common man has come into its own.

This term, "common man," suggests the deeper problem . . . One must never forget that the envy of the have-nots can be quite as consuming when the haves have character or intelligence as it is when they have merely material possessions.

* * *

Modern democracy inadvertently gave envy new scope. While the purpose of democracy was to give everyone a fair chance to rise, its method enabled rancorous men to invoke "equality" as an excuse of keeping all down to their own level.

Where does the great man fit into our homogenized society?

A powerful school of philosophers has denied any importance at all to great men. Such thinkers reject heroes as childish hangover from the days when man ascribed everything to the action of gods. History, they assert, is not made by men, but by inexorable forces or irrevocable laws.

This view of history is a form of fatalistic determin-

* * *

Fatalists differ greatly among themselves. But, however much they differ, they unite in the conclusion that the individual plays no role of his own in history. If they are right, then nothing could matter less whether or not this is an age without heroes.

But they are not right. The philosophy of historical fatalism rests on serious fallacies.

Great men enable us to rise to our own highest potentialities. They nerve lesser men to disregard the world and trust to their own deepest instinct.

* * *

An age without great men is one which acquiesces in the drift of history. Such acquiescence is easy and seductive; the great appeal of fatalism, indeed, is as a refuge from the terror of responsibility. Where a belief in great men insistently reminds us that individuals can make a difference fatalism reassures us that they can't.

It thereby blesses our weakness and extenuates our failure. Fatalism, in Sir Isaiah Berlin's phrase, is "one of the great alibis" of history.

Let us not be complacent about our supposed capacity to get along without great men. If our society has lost its wish for heroes and its ability to produce them, it may well turn out to have lost everything else as well.

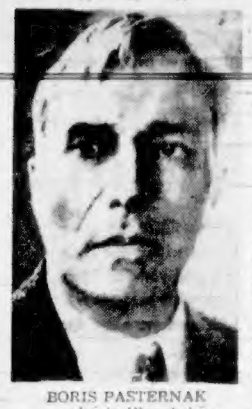
Exile from Russia

Author Begs for Life

MOSCOW (UPI) — Boris Pasternak, Nobel Prize-winner, has admitted his "errors" and pleaded with Premier Nikita Khrushchev to save him from exile, the official Tass news agency said yesterday.

★ ★ ★



BORIS PASTERNAK
. . . plea to Khrushchev

Tass said the central committee of the Communist party told the noted poet and novelist he was free to leave the Soviet Union forever if he wanted.

the United States probably would offer Pasternak asylum if he were expelled by the Soviet authorities and expressed a desire to live in America).

"Whatever my mistakes and errors may have been," Pasternak wrote to Khrushchev, "I could not imagine that I would find myself in the midst of such a political campaign which has been fanned under my name in the West.

"To go beyond the frontiers of my motherland is equal to death and therefore I beg you not to take this extreme measure towards me."

Pasternak, 67, has been under heavy fire since he won the Nobel prize for literature two weeks ago, for his novel "Doctor Zhivago." The award was denounced as a "political" manoeuvre designed to embarrass the Soviet government.

★ ★ ★

The book, which criticizes some aspects of life under Communism, is banned in the Soviet Union. Pasternak has been expelled from the Soviet Writers' union and denounced as a "traitor." There also have been demands he be stripped of his citizenship and expelled.

Tass said Pasternak sent a letter to Khrushchev, admitting "mistakes and errors" in his writings and making clear he had no desire to leave the Soviet Union. He noted also that he had rejected the award which he originally accepted.

The letter was addressed to Khrushchev, the central committee of the Soviet Communist party and the Soviet government. He referred to the demands of Soviet youth leader V. E. Semichastny that he "get out of Russia.

"This is impossible for me," said Pasternak. "I am bound to Russia by birth, life and work. I cannot imagine my fate apart from Russia and outside her.

"With my hand on my heart, I have done something for Soviet literature and I may still be useful to it."

★ ★ ★

Tass circulated the Pasternak letter with an accompanying statement by the Communist party central committee which said he was free to leave the Soviet Union to accept the prize in Stockholm or to stay away forever.

★ ★ ★

Tass said there "will be no objections against granting him such an exit visa," and added:

"If Pasternak wants to leave the Soviet Union . . .

social order and people which he slanders in his anti-Soviet composition, Dr. Zhivago and the official authorities will not hinder him in that respect in any way.

"He will be given the chance of departing beyond the frontiers of the U.S.S.R. and experiencing personally all the delights of the capitalist paradise.'"

Reds Get Book Via Vatican

THE HAGUE (AP)—A Dutch publishing firm has admitted printing copies of Boris Pasternak's Doctor Zhivago in Russian and an Italian publisher claims 1,200 copies reached Russia after distribution by the Vatican information service at the Brussels World Fair.

The publisher, Gian Giacomo Feltrinelli, called the Dutch printing an infringement of his claimed world publishing rights to the book, banned in Russia.

Solution Balanced Diet

Scurvy Treatment Began 'Limey' Tag

This column is one of a series prepared for the Daily Colonist by the B.C. Medical Society. In each case the author is an authority in his field, who for professional reasons remains anonymous.

Back in the days when Britain first teached out to span the seas of the world the crews of navy and merchant vessels suffered terribly from a disease known as scurvy. It was a horrible and often fatal affliction that threatened to deaden the enthusiasm of the average sailor for any more life at sea.

Somewhere along the line it was noticed that when these men came ashore the first thing they did was go for fresh fruits and vegetables. In tropical climes lemons and limes were the favorites. Soon, without exactly knowing why, the authorities began to ship more fresh fruits for the crews, and scurvy began to disappear.

British authorities made it compulsory for all ships to carry lime juice on board, and soon British sailors became known as "limejuicers" or "limeys." In some quarters, the name sticks to this day.

Scurvy, we know now, is a disease caused by an unbalanced diet, and we have learned that the essential element in fruit and fresh vegetables is something called Vitamin C. This element is useful in the healing of wounds, the building of strong bones, and for the general health of growing children.

BALANCE VITAL

Problems of improper diet need not be problems of starvation. Balance in diet is by far the most important point to watch, and the discovery and study of the vitamins marked a big step forward in the march of medicine.

Vitamin C is one of those elements which cannot be overdone. It can be cheaply and easily obtained in fruits and vegetables — preferably fresh—and almost everyone would benefit from a greater amount than they are now receiving.

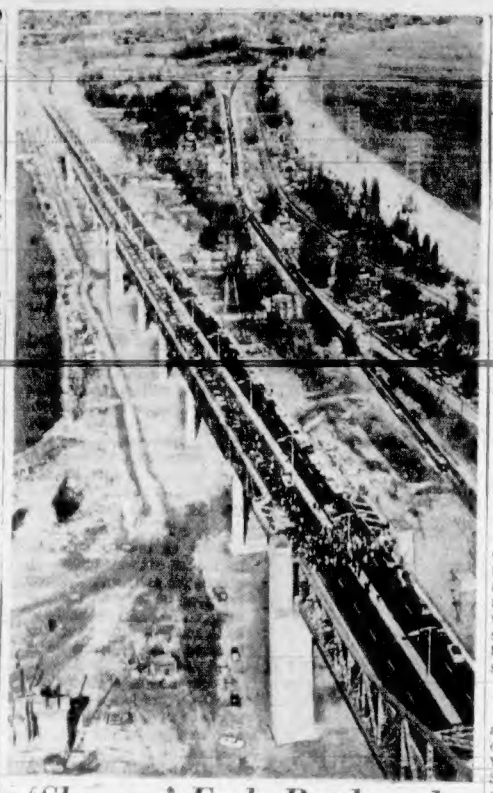
An adequate diet contains practically all the vitamins we need—but our modern ways of eating are poor. Few people cook potatoes with the skins on for instance, and those who do not, risk missing the Vitamin B2 that rests just under the skin. We eat rice that has the husk and vitamin removed, and we seem to avoid such healthy foods as whole wheat.

EXCESS REJECTED

Vitamins are among those medical things which have become topics of daily conversation, with the result that there is an unnecessary amount of self-medication in this direction. Actually, if you give yourself too much of any of the vitamins, your body will simply throw off the excess. Considering the cost of some vitamin preparations, it is a waste to take them when they are not needed.

Vitamins are not tonics, and if you have a normal balance of them in your system the addition of any more is not going to pep you up for the winter. On the other hand, if medical advice indicates a real need for vitamins, they can be valuable in restoring a balance that has been lost.

The best source of vitamins is the food you eat, particularly if that food is either fresh or is unhampered by special processes that have removed the goodness from it.



'Skyway' Ends Bottleneck

Perennial traffic bottleneck, one of worst in southern Ontario, has been ended with opening of the Burlington Bay "Skyway." Traffic rolled across the bridge after a brief ceremony in which Premier Frost said "Skyway" tolls would be used to build more bridges and super-highways throughout the province.

'Tail Fins? Gad, Sir'

U.K. Car Styles For Export Rapped at Home

LONDON (CP)—British car designers who spruce up their products for the lucrative North American market may be running into problems at home. It seems the average English motorist just doesn't want all these new-fangled gadgets.

Here is what a recent public opinion poll came up with! A majority of motorists want less chrome and less color. Only nine per cent want automatic transmissions and more than 50 per cent prefer the gearshift lever on the floor.

Tail fins? No, sir.

COLOR BATTLE

Manufacturers, questioned about this poll, took strong exception to its findings on the color question. They say they find bright and varied colors far more popular, than dark, conservative shades.

But on all the other points the poll seems to get a fair degree of approval from the carmakers.

A spokesman for the makers of Morris cars said the poll is "quite right" on the gearshift. "We had to put the lever back on the floor of two of our models this year. But of course export models will still have it on the steering-post."

TASTES RESPECTED

All the manufacturers were careful not to criticize the tastes of their domestic customers but they made it clear that they are having trouble coming up with a vehicle that will find approval on both sides of the Atlantic.

The Daily Mail says Britain's "stick-in-the-mud" motorists are holding back the country's car designers. "They are being forced to drag their feet in order not to outstrip their customers."

The manufacturers do not agree. They say British car design is well advanced and they point to the fact that English cars outsold all other foreign models in the United States this year.

BIG SELLERS

A spokesman for the Rootes Group says there is growing indication that what appeals to one customer also appeals to another. "We started painting our cars with bright two-tone colors especially for the North American market," he says, "and now these are the best sellers in England."

But the representative of another firm seemed to dispel any suggestion that American-style tail fins will appear in Britain for some time. With a look of disdain he said: "Gad, sir."

So far as chrome and automatic transmission are concerned, the manufacturers say that the extra cost may be a factor in dampening the enthusiasm of customers.

The Car Corner

Plymouth Remains Car of Distinction

By J. T. JONES

The 1959 Plymouth is a car of some distinction, especially notable for its good handling and solid road-holding. This is nothing new for Plymouth, which in the past few years has streaked up from a sort of workhorse homeliness to way-out styling and hot performance.

★ ★ ★

The two models I put through a workout were at either end of the Plymouth line: a Fury V-8 two-door hardtop and a Savoy sedan with six-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

The situation concerning the Fury is a little mixed up this year. In the past there was just one Fury model, with a drastically souped-up engine, heavy-duty suspension and invariably a cream paint job and gold trim. For 1959, the Fury has been brought into the regular line. Now it's the Sport Fury that has the extras.

I recall being much impressed with the first Fury, which had many of the characteristics of a good sports car and few of the vices of a large sedan. The present Fury carries on in the same way. On one particular piece of awful kinky road, in fact, it outdid the performance of an Ace-Bristol sports car by a small fraction. What the guess.

The six-cylinder Savoy is not the same kind of horse when it comes to power, but for handling it comes very close. The only detectable difference is that it doesn't have that mighty push that can hold the car level in a tight corner.

All the cars of the Chrysler line have torsion bar springs at the front and leaf springs at the rear, and are remarkable for the levelness and smoothness of their rides. All told, my impression is that they are just about tops in both ways, although they suffer from a bit too much flexibility on rough roads.

Styling of the Plymouths has been changed quite sharply this year, and the impression they give is of a much shorter, more compact car than last year's.

Most of this effect stems from the clipped-off tail fins. It's quite a pretty design and looks faster somehow. I like it better than the previous two years' lines.

In the stampede for the coming year's big-car market, Plymouth has a strong entry. It's going to need it.

Darryl Foster and his 1934 Ford coupe with 1950 Oldsmobile engine, which holds the record for the Port Alberni hillclimb course, are featured in a two-page spread in the current Hot Rod Magazine. This car may be remembered as the subject of one of these columns a couple of months back.

Surprise Hubby With $400 Shirt

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto men's shop has come up with something new—a shirt made of gold cashmere costing $400, advertised as "just the sort of surprise thing a woman will buy for her husband."

The casual wear shirts come equipped with 11 14-carat gold buttons, each set with a cultured pearl.

Convertible Brim Newest in Hats

MADRID — Maria Doreno of Palma de Mallorca has created a hat with convertible brim that is the newest rage among Spanish ladies. With simple unrolling, the hat brim can be increased to any practicable size to provide needed shade from the hot sun's rays. A cane attachment comes with the hat so that it can also be converted into an umbrella for two in case of rain.

On the Record

'Sing Along' Sequel Is an Absolute Dog

By JIM TAYIOR

Mitch Miller has a habit of taking the unlikeliest material and turning it into a hit record for Columbia.

For example, a few months ago he released an LP entitled "Sing along With Mitch Miller and the Gang." This turned out to be a real sleeper, so Miller has followed it with a sequel. He reaches dizzying heights of originality by calling this one "More Sing Along With Mitch Miller and the Gang."

It might better have been called "Music To Get Sloppy By." To teenagers, the songs on the disc are absolute dogs. To adults they are the sort that bring tears to the eyes when there is enough alcohol in the stomach.

The "More" LP contains such gems as "Shine On Harvest Moon," "The Whiffenpoof Song" and the like.

Idea of the LP seems to be "We're all buddies so let's get together and sing the old songs." Certainly the songs are suited to that special off-key harmony that can only be achieved after midnight at a house party.

Listening to the cuts, I could almost see the man at the old small-town theatre jumping up on the stage to yell "All right now, let's everybody sing," or, "Follow the Bouncing Ball!"

This will never make the hit parade, but if you like to sing at parties, it's something of a must. The only thing I've ever heard to top it is Don Costa's "Music To Break A Lease." This one could also drive a few landlords mad.

★ ★ ★

Getting away from records for the moment, there is a book on the market that will be of interest to those who like the "Tom Dooley" sort of song.

It's called "American Murder Ballads and Their Stories," by Olive Woolley, a Utah school m'arm and former author of children's books. Variety describes it as "an exciting, irreverent and sometimes ribald recap of U.S. murder songs of many viniages and sources."

Should be just the thing to pep up your next party.

NEW RELEASES: George Hamilton IV, who sings ballads with the power of an anaemic sparrow, probably has another hit disc in "The Two Of Us." The flip is "Lucy Lucy," a folk song with lots of appeal . . . Peggy Lee has released a gospel type song that swings enough to give it hit status with a few breaks. It's called "Light Of Love" . . . Gerry Granahan (remember "Sack Dress?") teams up with Eddie Fontaine to sing a rocker called "I'm As Ready As I'll Ever Be" . . . The Fontane Sisters have revived "Jealous Heart" for the umpteenth time and might possibly make it go . . . Two new groups out with new releases. The Chanels have an average rock 'n'roll ballad in "The Reason" and the Gaianes Brothers do a fine job on a tango-flavored bit called "Ting A Ling A Tango" . . . Norman Brooks, who once tried to make a career out of sounding like Al Jolson, makes another stab at it with a revival of "Bluebird of Happiness" . . . Pat Boone, who has a fine LP in "Stardust," has released another one called "Yes Indeed!" . . . Newest by Bobby Helms is "The Fool and the Angel" on Decca.

Plenty to See, and It's Live!

By BERT BINNY

It becomes increasingly hard to go along with the notion that there is nowhere to go for live entertainment in Victoria.

November offers two grand operas, three full-length plays, three musical recitals, the third pair of Victoria Symphony concerts and at least one High School attraction.

And this surge of varied entertainment spills over into December with another recital, two further three-act plays and a dance revue, all in the first eight days.

There are four recitals in 18 days. Very welcome is the return to the concert stage of bass-baritone Stanley Martin, who, in joint recital with duo-pianists Malcolm Hamilton and Richard Proudman, appears at Holyrood House, Nov. 19. Sponsor is the Victoria Musical Art Society.

Accompanied by Grace Timp, Mr. Martin will be heard in arias from Massenet's "Herodiade" and Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro" as well as a selection from the songs in memory of Ralph Vaughan-Williams, composed by him and sung at his recent funeral.

An "Elizabethan Suite," founded on virginal music by Ethel Bartlett, is one of the items to be performed by Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Proudman. Others are Claude Debussy's "Petite Suite," the Arenski Waltz, "Cradle Song by Rimsky-Korsakov and the Polka and Fugue from Rheinberger's "Schwanda."

This is certainly an interesting, diversified program.

* * *

On Nov. 26, lovely Victoria contralto Eleanor Duff appears in recital with the "Meistersingers" at St. Mary's Hall on Yale Street. This is the second program arranged by Richard Proudman in aid of St. Mary's Church Building Fund.

Three days later, at Holyrood House, the Victoria Chapter, RCMT Alumni present Arlene Nimmons and violinist Joseph Pach. This husband and wife team will play two sonatas for violin and piano in addition to solo groups.

* * *

A recital of sacred music follows the evening service at the Church of Our Lord, Humboldt Street, today. Artists are soprano Alice Waddell; contralto Marjorie Norbury; tenor Norman Tyrrell; baritone John Bray and organist J. Ingram Smith. A notable feature on the program will be a festival setting to the 100th Psalm, composed by Mr. Ingram Smith and sung by Mr. Bray to whom it is dedicated.

* * *

There is much activity in the africal circles, too.

The Theatre Guild and the Sooke Players open the same night, Nov. 22, with "The Paragon" and "Ladies in Retirement" respectively. St. Luke's Players and Victoria High School are on the boards with "Lust For Life," the story of Vincent van Gogh, and J. B. Priestley's "Laburnum Grove," during the first week in December.

* * *

The Peninsula Players are planning a play for children in mid-January. The parallel affair of January, 1958, was Madge Miller's adaptation of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," but choice of the coming play has not yet been made.

The Columbine Club is planning a full-length play for next June following their "The Reluctant Debutante" this year.

* * *

The biennial festival at Oak Bay High School this year features Japan. The "Fujiyama" festival on Wednesday offers 10 half-hour variety shows, all between 3.00 and 10.00 p.m. Mr. R. Edmonds is the organizer. Among many students involved in the marathon stage affairs are Dave Laundy, Peter Terry, Jim Carson, Barbara White, Irene Boone Lee-Ann Jones and Linda Patterson.

* * *

Opening the program for the third pair of Victoria Symphony concerts, Nov. 9 and 10, will be the Organ Toccato in D Major of Girolamo Frescobaldi.

Other items on this program are Shostakovitch's Symphony No. 5 and a violin concerto of Mendelssohn with soloist Betty-Jean Hagen.

This concert will be repeated in Duncan on Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Opera Company Is Really Grand

The many satisfactions to be gained from grand opera will become apparent when the Wagner Opera Company presents Puccini's "La Boheme" tomorrow and Verdi's "Rigoletto" on Tuesday. Both are at the Royal Theatre at 8.30 p.m.

The company not only has a superb cast and a large chorus but also a full symphony orchestra.

Additional interest and color is provided by the scenery and costumes.

Beyond these assets, there will of course be the widely known arias and passages to be heard and appreciated once more, such as "Si, Mi Chiamano Mimi" from "La Boheme," and the delightful "La donna e mobile" from "Rigoletto."

That these operas have lasted as long as they have is likely the greatest testimony to their value. "Rigoletto" was first performed in Venice 107 years ago while "La Boheme," with its opening at Turin in 1896, is a classic of 62 years.

Incidentally, The Wagner Opera Company is not named after Richard Wagner, the famous operatic composer but after their late founder, Charles L. Wagner, who, in 1940, started to bring grand opera at popular prices to smaller centres as well as key cities.

Drink, Smoking, Coffee

Cary Gives Up Bad Habits

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—As I found myself gaining weight a few years ago I immediately cut in half the size of all my meals.

"I know I won't make myself popular with the liquor industry, the coffee growers or the cigarette manufacturers by saying this," Cary chuckled. "But I don't need any of their products. Interest in my work is all the stimulus I need.

"I've never endorsed any of those items in advertisements either, for the simple reason that it would be dishonest to do so—sort of like saying 'Don't do as I do, do as I tell you.' That would be not at all a fair way to treat the fans."

Cary Grant a chance to expound his views on the evils of drink and a few other assorted habits—and he did so with vigor.

Arrested for drunk driving (in the movie), he is explaining to the judge that the liquor had actually been forced down his throat by kidnappers, since he himself was a nondrinker. The judge is skeptical, but orders the police to look into the matter before he sentences Cary next day.

NOT A DROP

The scene having run off smoothly, director Alfred Hitchcock orders the set lighted, and as he waits Cary concedes that the part is very fitting since he doesn't drink a drop.

"I gave up what little drinking I did over 10 years ago," he explained, "and six months ago I was hypnotized into deserting smoking. Now I've decided to give up what I consider another health hazard—coffee."

IN A HURRY

Asked if he was resorting to wife Betsy Drake's (their separation was recently announced) "hypnotism" methods once again, he laughed, then added seriously:

"I only used hypnotism that time because I was in a big hurry to get rid of the habit. But I'm discovering more each day that if you want to give up a thing you can, simply by making up your mind to it.

"It's more important to me to feel good and to look my best than to indulge in things that are a deterrent in achieving this aim. For instance, the minute

NEW YORK (NANA)—An alert shoeshine boy here should go a long way. Following the current trend he has posted a sign next to his stand that reads: Bootician.

Actor Yul Brynner, who has made a bald head his personal trade-mark, denied yesterday that his shaven scalp was designed as a giant publicity stunt. He said he would let his hair down as soon as his movie roles permitted.

Vaudeville Coming Back?

Big Name Stars On 'Road' Again

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Big bands and stage shows appear headed back to the movie houses!

Return of the type of combined variety and screen entertainment which flourished throughout the 1920's has been forecast by a number of top Hollywood entertainers, several of whom are actually preparing to set out on "the road" again.

The renewed demand for bands and vaudeville, which hit the skids almost simultaneously with the arrival of television, would seem to be coming from all key centres. Promoters of large auditoriums and concert halls, more or less dark for a dozen years or so, have sprung to life and are pelting the few remaining name bands with offers of paying play dates.

Significant straws in the wind are blowing up on every side. In Las Vegas, for instance, Harry James, brought in at the Flamingo Hotel for a test run, surprised the management by packing them in for a month without a supporting act. He and his boys have just been called back for a return run—and now all the casinos are name-band hunting.

Eyebrows were lifted last week as the famed Cocoanut Grove opened with Guy Lombardo and his band, the first time in many years that Hollywood's most solid night-club room has featured anything of this nature.

After finishing her star role in Sam Goldwyn's "Porgy and Bess," Pearl Bailey is going on tour to head a 90-minute stage show, co-starring with her husband, drummer Louis Bellson, who will conduct a 15-piece orchestra. Miss Bailey insists that the day of the big band and the stage show is back.

Edgar Bergen goes even farther. The manipulator of Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, predicts movie houses will be back soon with the old formula of variety shows, and a stage orchestra to bolster the film attraction.

Bergen is convinced such a renaissance would be the salvation of the big movie theatre today. "People everywhere are becoming fed up with sitting home looking at television night after night," he said. "They have come to miss the gregarious atmosphere of the old-style movie house, where, when the lights went on after the movie, and the band struck up, they could watch a procession of vaudeville acts on the stage.

"This was real live entertainment and gave everyone a sense of fun and adventure. In viewing just a picture, there is no feeling of being 'with' other people."

Bergen points to the good business being done by the little "art" theatres (now numbering more than 300 in the U.S.), "and not just because of Brigitte Bardot," he added.

"Most of them have little lounges where coffee is served and people manage to strike up a conversation," he said. "There are a lot of lonely people in this world and little touches like that help. The big movie houses are beginning to realize this, so I feel it won't be long now before convivial crowds will be gathering back there once more."

Classic Treat In Store

Not since students of North Saanich High School presented "Medea" in the spring of 1957 has classical tragedy been seen in these parts.

This omission is to be rectified on Saturday, with two performances by the Seattle Players of Sophocles' "Oedipus Rex."

These are at Oak Bay Junior High School at 2.00 and 8.30 p.m.

Tickets are available at the Hudson's Bay Co., Eaton's, Kent's Record Department or from any member of the Victoria Columbine Club.

Producer, director and lead player for the Seattle Company is Edward Jones.

Of his playing as "Oedipus," the Los Angles Examiner noted: "Jones' soliloquies are outstanding . . . he characterizes the Theban monarch movingly, building slowly without overplaying the role."

The Examiner found him "a capable director as well as a fine actor."

James Powers of the Hollywood Reporter noted Mr. Jones' "individual contributions to the role" and his "moments of considerable force."

And the Seattle Post-Intelligencer found him "a compelling figure."

Other members of the cast are Jan Haag as "Jocasta," James Harrison, Michael Rankin, Earl Gaines, Errol Pritchard, Edwin Bohlman, Judith Loss, Joan Atkins and Ellen and Janis Bamberg.

As future productions Mr. Jones contemplates "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Wuthering Heights" and "Othello."

School Spirit May Bring Sports Area

A show of school spirit by Belmont Junior-Senior High School students may result in the development of a cinder track and baseball, basketball and football grounds for the school.

A spokesman for Sooke school board said that last week two delegates of the student council presented a plan for the development of the school playground to the school board.

Students of the school were reported willing to participate in the playground development with work and donations.

The school board advised the delegation to revise the plan with some of its suggestions.

Robinson Leads Highland Games

John Robinson last week was elected president of the Victoria Highland Games Association.

Odd Prize Brought Her Fame

Betty-Jean Hagen, the brilliant Canadian violinist who appears Nov. 9, 10 and 11 with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, started out somewhat differently.

She began to study piano at the age of three. At four she won her first Music Festival award — for singing!

The prize: Violin lessons!

No Apologies For Boo-Boos

PARIS—President Rene Coty of France has advised feminine announcers on French radio and television not to apologize or become upset when they make mistakes on the air.

In an interview with speakers Catherine Langeurs and Jacqueline Caurat, he said: "I have 50 years of speechmaking behind me, and if I had stopped to apologize for all my errors, I'd never have had time to put my points across."

Why Bennett Picked Peace

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

It is now pretty well established that the next big electrical power development in B.C. is going to be in the Peace River watershed.

Premier Bennett has indicated that later this month he will divulge the details of the proposed operations of the newly formed Peace River Power Development Company.

The premier's backing of the Peace River project is being criticized in many quarters on the ground that it could saddle the province—already burdened with the highest electricity rates of any major Canadian province—with even more expensive power.

Critics rightly point out that the lowest cost power could be developed from the Fraser River, and that the harnessing of the Columbia, with "benefits" coming from the U.S., would run it a close second. The costs of developing the Peace River are considered to be distinctly higher.

The premier has given his reasons for the choice of the Peace.

He says the Fraser is out until such time as everyone is satisfied that hydro electrification on the river will not damage the migratory fish.

The Columbia has to be ruled out because it could be several years before international differences are resolved.

With these two objections in mind, it was easy for Mr. Bennett to swing his favors towards the north.

Since the Social Credit government came into power it has had its sights steadily turned on the north.

Long before Wenner Gren entered the picture, the government had decided to take the Pacific Great Eastern Railway into the Peace.

The discoveries of gas and oil in this part of the province merely whetted the government's appetite for the harvest of the northern frontier.

Wenner Gren came along with the promise that he could influence foreign capital to the area, and this is apparently what he is now doing.

It probably does not matter to Premier Bennett that Mr. Gren has shelved his original project of running a monorail through the Rocky Mountain trench for a power development (apparently to be run by British interests).

What the premier wants is development of the north, and even if it is initially going to be tough to find adequate markets for the Peace River hydro, the mere fact that the power exists is enough to persuade Mr. Bennett that it is going to be a good thing for his new love, the Northland.

Cities Sacrificed?

The question now is this. Is the premier sacrificing the cities—Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria, etc.—for his pet project? Is he going to force the B.C. Power Commission and the B.C. Electric Company to buy high cost Peace River power?

The premier says no. If Peace River power is to be used in the south, it will have to stand on its own feet competitively.

The B.C. Electric Company has also denied that it has given any undertaking to buy Peace River power.

It will then be asked, if no government concessions are being made, why anyone should want to invest in a hydro development with such nebulous hopes.

Apparently however the world is still amply endowed with this sort of risk capital.

So far as Mr. Bennett is concerned there are other reasons than that of delay which makes the Peace development preferable to the Columbia at this stage.

If the dam were installed at Mica Creek it would still be about 275 miles as the crow flies from Vancouver. The transmission line would presumably have to snake its way through valleys to by-pass three major mountain ranges, and the actual length of the transmission line could easily be 500 to 600 miles.

The power from Mica Creek generating stations would also be most readily available to parts of the province where hydro electric energy is already provided by B.C. Power Commission at Whatchan, and Consolidated Mining and Smelting hydro plants at Brilliant, West Kootenays and Pend-d' Oreille.

Because of the extremely rugged terrain in most of the lower mainland, the prospects for large industrial development outside of the coastal and valley areas are limited.

If the Peace River development precedes the Columbia, the straight line distance to the Vancouver area would be about 470 miles, or 200 miles further than the Mica Creek site, but it would have no significant mountain ranges to cross and would probably be laid on a much more direct course, so that the actual transmission line difference might not be more than 100 miles.

The Peace River development would also make electrical power available in quantity and at reasonable rates in the great northern plateauland which Mr. Bennett sees as the future industrial empire of the province.

On the other hand if the Columbia development came ahead of the Peace, it is conceivable that the northland would not get any large scale electrification scheme for many years, except by expensive transmission line from the existing B.C. grid.

On these grounds, Premier Bennett's personal enthusiasm for the Peace River is understandable and in line with his government's northland policy.

Borden Bombshell

From the stock market point of view, the bombshell from the Borden Commission report is the recommendation that funded debt of the various pipeline companies should not be taken into consideration when the rates are being fixed.

This is a revolutionary suggestion, and one which if applied to other utilities—might have tremendous repercussions.

So far as the pipeline industry is concerned it would necessitate an immediate reappraisal of the various companies' earning potential, for some have much larger percentages of borrowed capital than others.

The Borden Commission said it had given deep consideration to the method of designing rates to yield a fixed rate of return on the value of the assets employed.

It found that when this method is used the net profit of the company could represent as between different companies, varying rates of return upon the shareholders' equity.

Only if the companies' bond interest were equal to the allowable return on the equity shares would the return be the same to all companies, and of course this is not the case.

Indeed the Borden Commission was worldly wise enough to realize that in practically every case the allowed rate of return on assets would have to be higher than the rate at which the company was able to borrow funds—otherwise borrowing of funds would serve little useful purpose.

The Borden Commission does not like the situation whereby the company with the largest proportion of funded debt is able to present its shareholders with a bigger part of the loot from the net profits.

The commission opposes this "leverage" because it realizes that inordinate profits might result to shareholders who bought into some of the pipeline companies for a few cents a share.

It wants to see a method of regulation adopted, and it recommends that it should be left to the Board of Transport Commissioners to exercise its discretion in a fair manner so that in each case a level of earnings should be maintained sufficient to attract the necessary capital.

The commission believes the board will have no difficulty in evolving an equitable and acceptable method of determining from time to time the fair value of assets represented by the shareholders' equity.

Assuming that the government implements this part of the Borden report, it will still be left to the Board of Transport Commission to fix the rates, and at the moment it seems rather pointless to try to work out how each individual company would fare when each case would have to be considered on its merits.

The pipeline position might not be as black as is presently being painted by many experts in the oil and gas industry, but it is an undeniable fact that when any industry becomes enmeshed in more than the usual government regulations it begins to lose its appeal for the average investor.

Barlow, Plimley Buy Gladwell's

$500,000 Deal

Details of a $500,000 transaction which resulted in a change of ownership of Gladwell Motors were released yesterday.

The name of the firm, which handles the Mercury, Meteor and Lincoln dealership in Victoria, will be changed by new owners Cliff Barlow and William Plimley, who have bought out Mr. Gladwell.

The new owners, who are brothers-in-law, have also bought out Mr. Gladwell's shares in the English Car Centre which handles British Ford Cars.

Mr. Barlow, who went into partnership with Mr. Gladwell two years ago, has been with the firm since 1954.

Mr. Gladwell said he plans to retire but will retain ownership of the property on which Gladwell Motors is located at Pandora and Quadra. The lot which formerly housed the Gladwell Used Cars is now vacant and will be rented.

He said yesterday he would remain in Victoria.

The company will retain its Ford dealerships.

Mr. Barlow said that his wife, Doreen, and Mrs. Alice Plimley, both daughters of the late Percy Plimley and grand-daughters of the late Thomas Plimley, would be on the board of directors of the new firm.

He said he could not yet announce the new name of the company.

Penny 'Pop' Big Blast

LONDON (AP)—Kenneth Whittington, 9, popped a penny firecracker through a hole in a street lamp.

The bang ignited an underground gas leak. A four-foot hole was blasted in the sidewalk. Houses were rocked and drain covers blown high into the air. Some 200 children were marched to safety from a school.

Kenneth ran home and climbed into bed.

U.S. Recovery Picks Up Steam

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States recovery from recession continued to pick up steam last week.

The car industry came to life with a sudden production spurt that promised to benefit many other lines of business.

Big General Motors settled the last of its local labor disputes and swung into high gear. By week's end, all 11 of Chevrolet's final assembly plants were back in operation after more than three weeks of shutdown.

Ford, Plymouth, Dodge, Rambler and Studebaker went on overtime. Some 98,000 shiny new models rolled off the assembly lines—the biggest weekly outpouring of passenger cars from U.S. factories since February.

Steel production, paperboard output and freight carloadings slowed up a bit. Stock prices retained a little from their historic highs. Still much on the upbeat, though, were department store sales, electric power use, and dollar volume of contracts awarded for future construction.

A report by F. W. Dodge Corp. showed construction contract awards still racking up impressive gains over 1957.

But contracts awarded for manufacturing plants were down 17 per cent in dollar volume, indicating that big business is not yet ready to boost its capital spending plans.

Some 7,900 banks will hand out $1,365,000,000 to Christmas Club depositors, three per cent more than in the 1957 payoff.

Coal Output Leaps

Chinese Miners Busy

HONG KONG (NANA)—Red China, spurred by its "leap forward" campaign to industrialize the country almost overnight, may take Britain's place next year as the fourth leading coal producer in the world.

According to the production figures for October, coal is being brought to the pitheads at the rate of 795,400 tons a day. This would total nearly 300,000,000 tons a year, the approximate rate at which British coal is mined.

The October production, moreover, was 28 per cent greater than that in August. If this rate of increase is maintained, Red China soon will overtake West Germany as a coal producer and would be in the same league as the United States and Soviet Russia.

Much of this increase is attributed to the thousands of small collieries opened throughout China. It is estimated that 1,300 of Red China's 2,000 counties have exploitable coal deposits. Many of these deposits are being worked by hand by members of co-operatives and communes, before the arrival of modern machinery.

Red China has known reserves of 1,500,000 million tons, compared to Britain's 175,000 million tons. Peiping claims that it has enough coal to supply its needs for the next 3,500 years and at double the present rate of consumption.

Duncan Blast Still Mystery

DUNCAN—Police are baffled by a mysterious explosion which shook houses in a four-mile radius here on Halloween.

RCMP said yesterday they [illegible] area for damage caused by a "terrific detonation" at 9.45 p.m.

"We had a dozen phone calls inside of 10 minutes, and we spent the next three hours checking the four-mile radius where the calls came from," RCMP said.

"We haven't a clue what caused it. We think it was dynamite; they don't make firecrackers like that. We're still looking for somebody who is [illegible] in the area," the RCMP said.

Apparently no one was injured by the blast, and no one reported any property damaged, they said.

One resident said "nearly half a case of dynamite" would have been needed to create so heavy an explosion.

Fireworks Ban Sought

Egg Missiles Hit Alderman's Car

DUNCAN—A ban or certainly stricter restrictions on the sale of fireworks will be sought here for next year after a hectic Halloween on Station Street.

Gangs of boys and girls roamed the streets hurling cannon crackers and some fired eggs at passing cars.

Alderman S. H. Saunders, who reported his car was spattered repeatedly with thrown eggs, said he might seek to have the sale of fireworks banned next year.

He said if fireworks sales weren't banned the sale should be restricted to three days before Halloween with no sales on Halloween night.

"An alternative might be to charge a $200 licence fee for selling fireworks," he said. "The presence of police patrolling on foot would also help."

B.C. Woods Industry Soon to Spurt Ahead

PORT ALBERNI—The British Columbia forest industry, in a post-war "rest-period" now, will spurt ahead again on the shoulders of three basic trends, Ian S. Brand, MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. executive, said here Saturday.

They were an expected annual U.S. construction spending increase from $32 billion in 1952 to $45 billion by 1975; a 10,000,000 rise by 1980 in Canadian population demanding wood products, and a gradually increasing world living standard to boost the demand.

Mr. Brand, general manager of the company's western district converting mills, was speaking to the annual convention of the B.C. Saw Filers' Educational Association.

Richard Widmark is encouraging long-time friend, Gene Tierney to co-star with him next year in "Irresistible" — the story of the Dead Sea scrolls—for his own company.

Oak Bay Goes Oriental

Japanese "geisha girls" and Oriental lanterns will set the mood for the Oak Bay Senior High School fall fair to be held at the school from 3 p.m. to 10.30 p.m., Wednesday.

The "Fugiyama Festival" fair is being held to raise funds for the school's extra curricular activities. The objective is $2,500.

Fair officials report they have already netted $1,200 through advance sale of 4,000 tickets.

Chief attractions will be a Japanese tea room, white elephant, home cooking, garden and other stalls and a variety show by students, which will feature a chorus line, harmony group and skits. Students assisting at the fair will be dressed in Japanese costumes.

Offered to City Stores

'Fountain of Youth' Tonic Investigated

Federal food and drugs inspectors are investigating a Toronto firm which has offered a "Fountain of Youth" tonic to some Victoria drug stores.

Inspector Earle Ketchison of Victoria sent a copy of a crudely printed pamphlet to the Vancouver office yesterday to be forwarded to Montreal.

The pamphlet offers packages of "Pega Palo," described as a vine which grows in the jungles of the Dominican Republic, for $15 each, three packages for $37.50 or eight for $75.

At least two druggists here have received the pamphlets.

In carefully-worded language, the pamphlet suggests the vine can increase virility, but at no time does it promise anything more than "great invigoration."

The first three pages of the pamphlet are a reprint of an article about the vine, published in an American magazine about 18 months ago.

At one point, the pamphlet admits "no basic requirement in human nutrition has been established for this product."

Mr. Ketchison scoffed at the suggestion that the vine is a miracle gland tonic.

Importation of the vine into Canada is banned unless it is to be used in religious ceremonies. Some South American Indians use "Pega Palo" that way.

There is no evidence that druggists in Greater Victoria have bought samples of the vine, Mr. Ketchison said.

A Victoria druggist said last night here was little call for similar tonics from the general public and he felt medical treatment was preferable.

Bombers' Smiles Tell the Story

Dan Young, quarterback and team captain of the Vancouver Blue Bombers, accepts the provincial junior football championship trophy from Dr. Roger Paris, president of the Vancouver Big Four Junior Football League, following their 34-6 win over Victoria's Navy Rams yesterday in the sudden-death provincial final at Macdonald Park. Spokane, Rested, Ready, Trounces Cougars, 6-1

SPOKANE—Spokane Flyers, benefitting mightily from a schedule which called for only six games in their first 22 days in the Western Hockey League, and five of those on home ice, continued to surprise here Saturday night.

EMILE FRANCIS

The well-rested Flyers, cheered on by 4,908 fans, knocked off the Victoria Cougars, 6-1, in a game much closer than the final score would indicate. Victory boosted Flyers into a second-place tie in the Western Division.

Flyers have won four and tied one on home ice. In their only effort away from home, they were trounced by Seattle Totems, 10-2. They tackle the Totems in Seattle again tonight. Not until Nov. 14 do the Flyers show in any other league city except Seattle.

COUGARS TIRED

Cougars, showing weariness after playing in Seattle Friday night and riding the bus to Spokane yesterday, put up a stiff battle which might have gone their way except for a brilliant performance by veteran Emile Francis, who tended the nets for Victoria last season and was sold to the Flyers this season to make way for Marcel Pelletier.

EVEN CLOSER

Francis, who missed his first shutout of the season by less than two minutes in a 3-1 win over Vancouver Canucks Wednesday, was even closer last night. Only 23 seconds remained when a shot by defenceman Don McLeod hit the Spokane goalie and trickled behind him into the net.

Francis was given great support by Lionel Repka and Joe Lund, two of his defencemen. Repka hustled throughout and twice in the second period blocked shots which might have changed the course of the game. Lund, a real veteran, continually broke up Victoria attacks with clever checking.

Bev Bell, Flyers' leading scorer, started things rolling with a goal at 14.03 of the first period. Max Mekilok, Walt Bradley and Ching Johnson ran the count to 4-0 in the second period and Bradley and Dell Topoll made it a rout in the third period before McLeod spoiled Francis' shutout hopes.

Lions Fumble For Last Time

VANCOUVER—B.C. Lions, trying to win their last game of the 1958 Western Interprovincial Football Union season for coach Dan Edwards, tried too hard last night and costly penalties figured largely in the 24-14 defeat pinned on them by the champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

A crowd of 18,918 fans saw game officials penalize the Lions 10 times for 105 yards. Many of the penalties came at crucial times and four of them gave the Bombers first downs.

Penalties helped particularly in the first quarter, when Bombers grabbed a 10-0 lead on a converted touchdown by Leo Lewis and a field goal by Jim Van Pelt.

After a scoreless second quarter, Ron Latourelle and Ernie Pitts boosted the Bombers into a safe lead with touchdowns, both converted by Van Pelt.

FOUGHT BACK

Lions tightened there and fought back hard, scoring touchdowns on passes from quarterback Al Dorow to Rick Kaser and Ed Vereb. Ted Hunt kicked the convert each time to complete the scoring. The fourth quarter was scoreless.

Bombers gained 182 yards on the ground and 236 in the air as Van Pelt, Barry Roseborough, Charlie Shepard, Lewis and Jim Tonn between them completed 15 of 30 passes.

Dorow completed 14 of 27 passes for 178 yards and the Lions, minus fullbacks Joe Yamauchi and By Bailey, picked up 159 yards on the ground.

Junior Rams Take Beating From Bombers

By GARTH WILTON

Vancouver Blue Bombers, getting two-touchdown performances from each member of their potent backfield brother act, captured the B.C. junior football title yesterday at Macdonald Park, rolling to a 34-6 victory over Victoria's Navy Rams in the sudden-death provincial final.

Blue Bombers, who were unbeaten in eight games this season before meeting the Rams, will now play the Alberta champions in the Western Canada junior semi-final.

Quarterback Dan Young, a smooth ball-handler and heady signal-caller, and younger brother George, a power-running halfback were the best of the Blue Bombers, a well-drilled club that was more efficient than spectacular.

Striking for their first touchdown early in the first quarter, the Blue Bombers dominated play throughout as their heavier line outplayed the Rams' and their backs ran well, with and without blocking.

George Young, an 18-year-old who won the most valuable player award in the four-team Vancouver junior league this season, scored his first touchdown on a 67-yard kickoff return and the second on a 30-yard run on a reverse.

He also kicked a single, handled all his club's punting and kickoff chores and was the team's most consistent ground-gainer.

His brother, Dan, opened the scoring with a one-yard plunge and ended it by racing 17 yards on a keeper play late in the final quarter.

Dave Howie, a second-string quarterback who also runs out of a halfback position, scored Vancouver's other touchdown, crashing over from the six-yard line. He kicked the convert and tackle Malcolm Brophy trapped a ball-carrier in the Navy end zone for a safety touch.

END RUN

Navy's only touchdown was scored by halfback Barry Glover on a 25-yard end run early in the final quarter after Vancouver had taken a 29-0 lead.

Esquimalt Advances One Step

Esquimalt, staging a strong second-half rally, defeated Butler Brothers, 6-3, yesterday at Royal Athletic Park to advance to the second round of competition for the Jackson Cup.

Outplayed by a wide margin in the first half, Esquimalt scored four straight goals in the second half to wipe out a 2-1 deficit. They meet Heaneys in second-round play.

George Adams and George Paul paced the Esquimalt comeback, scoring a pair of goals each. Alex Stewart and Dave Wakelin scored the other Esquimalt goals.

For Butler Brothers, George Robbins tallied twice, both goals coming in the first half and Gary Crowe added their third marker, scoring on a penalty kick late in the last half after Esquimalt had taken a 5-2 lead.

Royals Whacked By Calgary Club

New Westminster's crippled Royals took a 9-3 thumping at Calgary last night as they completed a disastrous trip to the eastern division of the Western Hockey League.

Royals, minus three regular forwards, were beaten in Winnipeg, 8-5, and in Edmonton, 5-2, and had won, 3-1, in Saskatoon before last night's game. They have won only two and tied one of 11 games and have been scored on 58 times.

CANUCKS TIE

In last night's other inter-divisional game, Vancouver Canucks played their second overtime tie in as many nights, holding the Quakers to a 3-3 stalemate at Saskatoon. On Friday night, Canucks split eight goals with the Warriors at Winnipeg.

WHL attendance, away up this season in most cities, continued to be good with 4,369 fans on hand at Calgary and approximately 3,000 showing up at Saskatoon.

Royals were without forwards Arnie Schmautz, Arlo Goodwin and Art Jones last night. They just couldn't keep up in the late going although no worse off than 1-2 with less than four minutes left in the second period. Three Calgary goals in two minutes and 46 seconds then settled the issue.

BUSY NIGHT

Lou Jankowski, with two goals and two assists, and Ed Dorohoy and Sid Finney, each with a goal and three assists, led the Calgary attack which poured 44 shots at rookie goalkeeper Don Campbell.

Assistant-coach Jackie McLeod, all-star winger for the Canucks last season, fired a third-period goal which gave the Quakers a split of the points after Canucks had taken the lead three times. Both goal tenders, Vancouver rookie Bruce Gamble and Saskatoon veteran Lucien Dechene, turned in stand-out games.

Vikings Handcuffed By Vancouver Team

Victoria College Vikings, their inexperience painfully obvious during most of the contest, took a 57-39 beating from the Vancouver Cloverleafs last night in an exhibition senior "A" basketball game at Victoria high school.

The Cloverleafs weren't at their best, but they didn't have to be.

Bill Garner's Vikings showed flashes of senior "A" basketball but invariably it was their own mistake rather than the Cloverleafs that proved their downfall.

Using a controlled, set offence, the Vikings came up with their share of scoring chances but were woefully weak under the basket, missing shots that would have shamed a high school player.

Ray Goodwin, an easy-going forward who undoubtedly had more fun than anyone else on the floor, paced the Vancouver club with 15 points. Mike Fraser and Lorne Holyoak added 11 and 10 points respectively.

For the Vikings, Ken McCulloch hit for 13 points and played a strong two-way game.

Cloverleafs—John Lescisin 3, Ray Goodwin 15, Gord Gimple 7, John Braithwaite 3, Mike Fraser 11, Chuck Dean 2, Ed Lorens 3, Lorne Holroak 10, Total 57.

Records Tumble In Regina Clash

REGINA — Edmonton fullback Johnny Bright and Saskatchewan halfback Jack Hill both set new individual Western Inter-provincial Football Union records Saturday as the two clubs wound up their league play with a meaningless game which was a warm-up for their semi-final series starting here next Saturday.

For the record, Roughriders won it, 28-14, to balance their record with seven wins and two ties for their 16 games.

Eskimos, using stars Jackie Parker and Normie Kwong hardly at all, seemed only intent on seeing that Bright would break his own rushing record of 1,679 yards for one season. The big fullback did it easily, picking up, unofficially, 104 yards to set the new record at 1,707 yards.

RECORD TOTAL

Hill, an elusive runner and top-notch pass-catcher who does the placement kicking for his club, scored two touchdowns and kicked four converts for 16 points, boosting his season's total to 145 to easily break the former league record of 131 set last season by Gerry James.

Hill scored one of his touchdowns with a spectacular end zone catch of one of Frank Tripucka's passes, the other on a fine run around end.

HAGLER HURT

The victory may have been costly for the Riders. Mike Hagler, their elusive little halfback, was hit hard in the third quarter and helped off the field with a badly-wrenched knee. It is feared the injury is serious enough to keep him out of the two-game semi-finals.

Riders enjoyed a wide edge in play. They picked up 28 first downs to 18 for the Eskimos, outgained the Edmonton club, 330 yards to 201 in the air and 280 yards to 115 on the ground. Fullbacks Cookie Gilchrist and Bobby Marlow, playing perhaps his best game of the season, rolled up plenty of yardage.

Ken Carpenter, with a fine end-zone catch of a Tripucka pass, and Vic Marks, on a sustained march by an all-Canadian Saskatchewan team, got the other Rider touchdowns.

Bright and Don Getty, who quarterbacked the entire game, both went over from the one-yard line for Edmonton touchdowns. Parker kicked the converts.

Louisiana State Unbeaten, Now Sugar Bowl Material

Louisiana State, a clawing upstart which hasn't played in a bowl game since 1950, last night got by one of its biggest hurdles in the surprise try for an unbeaten, untied season by blanking Mississippi, unbeaten and untied previously, 14-0.

The fine win will undoubtedly retain for Louisiana State the No. 1 ranking for another week at least and almost certainly meant a bid to play in the Sugar Bowl game on New Year's Day.

Louisiana State is now the only major college team unbeaten and untied. Colorado lost its rating yesterday when clobbered, 23-7, by Oklahoma in a game which meant a chance to play in the Orange Bowl for the winning team.

Iowa all but wrapped up the Big Ten championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl with a 37-14 conquest of Michigan.

Mantle on Block?

Rumors about the world champion New York Yankees continue to infiltrate the baseball world. Latest bunch have Yankees trading Mickey Mantle to Cleveland and Lee MacPhail, director of player personnel, taking a front-office job with Baltimore Orioles.

Yankees and Indians both have denied the Mantle story. It went the rounds that Mantle would go to the Tribe for pitcher Herb Score, outfielder Rocky Colavito and $100,000.

The MacPhail rumor seems more plausible. He would be an executive vice-president with the Orioles, looking after their scouting system, which is considered general manager Paul Richards' weak spot.

Sailors Win Contest But Drop Playoff

Navy held Oak Bay Drakes to an unconverted touchdown by Gary Taylor in the fourth quarter of their Victoria Football League playoff game yesterday at Macdonald Park to squeeze out a 13-9 victory in the second game of the two-game, total-point series.

The loss was Oak Bay's first in local league play in the last three years.

However, the Drakes won the series by virtue of a 31-6 win in the first game and will now meet the winner of the Surrey Rams-Vancouver Wildcats series for the B.C. intermediate championship.

The fourth quarter of the second game had to be postponed until yesterday when fog prevented the teams from finishing the game Friday night.

BEHIND THE GLASS

By Jim Tang

It seems that the curling season is barely under way, but Consols playdowns at the Victoria Curling Club will start next Saturday with the first two games of a round-robin series involving eight rinks.

All games will be played on Saturday nights. The third will be [illegible] the seventh Dec. 20.

Reason for the early start and the stretched-out round-robin series is the lack of enough ice time at the busier Memorial VCC. The only possible way Consols could make the setup to play late in the evening on every Saturday (Tuesday, Thursday, Sat. and all of those are open either).

The [illegible] Nov. 15 has been set aside for a "shorty" bonspiel Nov. 29 [illegible] because many of the Canada curlers are [illegible] Vancouver's Totem Bonspiel and playing over for the other top games.

After Dec. 20 the annual Commercial Bonspiel will still be going Dec. 27 and the B.C. Pacific Command Bonspiel will take up the ice Jan. 3. With the zone finals to be played here Jan. 17 and 18 [illegible] one date Jan. 10 for a playoff if one is needed to fill the "home" zone between the two Victoria winners. The zone final will again be a round-robin between [illegible] rinks, 28 each from the Victoria [illegible] and Alberta Valley clubs with three draws a day for five days.

Tom Cowan heads the list of entries with the same rink which won the provincial Consols championship last season. Bill Dowson, Gary Long and Bob Pollard.

Other regulars are:

By M.-V. CHESNUT, FRHS

OLEANDER PEST—(L. C., Victoria). Those circular blobs on the stems and leaf joints of your Oleander are scale bugs, a sap-sucking insect which in its adult stage has a shell rather like a wrinkle or limpet on a rock.

[illegible] stage the young scales can be [illegible] by sponging with half a teaspoonful of Malathion in a pint of soapy water. If they are allowed to grow on to their adult stage however, none of the ordinary insecticides will penetrate their shell.

If there are too many to be picked off or you find only a few, it may be [illegible] cutting back with a sharp [illegible] to within the new growth and burning [illegible] the cuttings.

MANURE MULCH—(C. F. B., Victoria). Your pile of rotted sawdust and chicken manure will make a most valuable mulching material for your perennial flowers, annual beds, shrubs and even vegetables. It would be best though to store it in the dry for now and apply it in the spring.

Don't be in too big a hurry to spread it around your plants for surface [illegible] keeps the soil from warming up as it should.

CAMELLIA PROTECTION—(A. C., Victoria). Most of the Camellias grown hereabouts are the Japanese variety which are quite hardy and need no special protection except to choose a location sheltered from the moist west winds and to feed a heavy blossom or sometimes [illegible] but they can with [illegible] severe frost[illegible] if protected from the morning sun and they are permitted to thaw out slowly. For the reason a western northwest wall is best.

[illegible] notice [illegible] for killing weeds and weakening bulbs and [illegible] dissolve a teaspoonful per five gallons of water. Use enough of the solution to [illegible] the [illegible].

GLADIOLUS STORAGE—(L. E., Victoria). Glad bulbs should be stored for about four weeks after lifting in a temperature between 70 and 80 degrees. When the withered old bulb can be twisted off from the base of the new corm ripening is completed and the bulbs should be cleaned up and [illegible] a temperature as close to 40 degrees as you can manage.

The spawn of cormlets are removed when cleaning up the parent bulbs and are stored in the same way. These are sown in a seedbed that harrowed trench soil as you would peas but it is a good idea to sprout them first by pressing them with damp sand in February and keeping them at room temperature.

For pest and disease control, glad bulbs and cormlets I use one of the proprietary rose dusts. The bulbs are dusted once after lifting and brought indoors and again when ripening and cleaning and just before storing them in cool storage. For storage cobblestone are good, sacks or old mesh stockings hung from a rafter in [illegible] corner of the basement.

Simonds Told Monty:

Slight Unforgiven

Keep McNaughton Out

A [illegible] Lt.-Gen. H. L. McNaughton [illegible] in 1941 has never been forgotten by the Wartime Canadian Army commander, it was disclosure of Field Marshal Monty [illegible].

It was Montgomery's intention, as [illegible] Sicily, to bring Gen. McNaughton [illegible] campaign when Mr. McNaughton in Malta with a party of staff officers wanted to visit the Canadians fighting as part of Montgomery's Eighth Army.

"The 1st Canadian Division had not been in action before and officers and men were just beginning to find their feet," Gen. Simonds, the divisional commander was young and [illegible] perseverance, it was the first time he had commanded a division in battle.

Montgomery wrote that he was determined the Canadians must be left alone and he was not going to have General Simonds bothered with visitors when he was engaged against first-rate German troops.

However, to make sure I went to see Simonds and asked him if he would like McNaughton to come to Sicily. His reply was immediate. "For God's sake keep him away. On that score," he was reported to have said, "I assured me that he had never forgiven me for denying him entry to Sicily in July 1943.

Montgomery is critical of the planning for, and conduct of the Sicilian campaign but has nothing but praise for the Canadians who, he writes, "were magnificent.

"They had done no fighting casualties."

GEN. McNAUGHTON

GEN. SIMONDS

Montgomery says that after the Sicilian campaign ended Mr. Naughton was his guest at his Taormina headquarters.

He adds: I have not seen him since those days although I have had many visits to Canada [illegible] sake keep him away. On that score [illegible] he was reported to have said, "I assured

Buchanan to Live—on Film

HOLLYWOOD (CNANA)—Musical comedy star Jack Buchanan's widow is writing the story of his life to be a film with Herbert Wilcox producing. Buchanan discovered Mrs. Wilcox—Anna Neagle—when she was one of the "Cochran Young Ladies" at the London Pavilion. The girl they all want to portray Anna is My Fair Lady star Julie Andrews. They will also need players to impersonate Beatrice Lillie, Gertie Lawrence and C. B. Cochran.

* * *

Paul Robeson has signed to star as Othello at Stratford-on-Avon, with British star Mary Ure as Desdemona. Robeson also plans to live more or less permanently in England.

* * *

Maureen O'Hara will star for Rouben Mamoulian in his Broadway musical production of Lysistrata originally penned by Aristophanes. If you remember, this is the tale of the Green Women who refused their favors to their husbands until they stopped war. It's still a good idea.

* * *

John Bromfield's new TV series, "U.S. Marshal," will be made as a feature movie in December by his Desilu bosses.

* * *

Jeff Hunter has discovered a new way to water-ski. He hires a helicopter to pull him.

"The Horse Soldiers" has to be a hit. The producer, Martin Rackin and John Lee Mahin, have given such terrific guarantees $7,500,000 each to John Wayne and William Holden, and $500,000 to director John Ford. That's $2,000,000 before a foot of film is turned.

* * *

Cmdr. Lionel Crabb, the frogman who disappeared [illegible] reputedly while a Russian battleship at Portsmouth, Eng., last year, was on the job for the British naval intelligence for the sum of slightly less than $100. He wanted the money to buy back a painting. Laurence Harvey, who stars as Crabb in "The Silent Enemy," told me, "It's a fine movie and the British cooperated on the understanding that the entire Portsmouth episode be eliminated.

* * *

In Billy Wilder's "My Sister and I," Audrey Hepburn will play the two title roles. Audrey is currently winding up "Green Mansions" at Metro.

Winning Contract

There have been countless tales, mostly exaggerated, about the proverbial "Little Old Lady" who wrecks the great experts. After one recent experience however, we have become true believers. Witness today's deal:

North's opening club bid is on the light side, but it is safer to open such hands than to enter the bidding with them later.

After West won the diamond king he switched to a low heart at trick two. The dear L. O. L. won East's queen with her king, laid down the ace and king of trumps and appeared most dismayed when West failed on the second round. Even East felt a little sorry for her, and leaned back in his seat awaiting the inevitable confession of at least one trump trick. After some thought the L.O.L. led her king of clubs, overtook it with dummy's ace and ruffed a diamond. She then played her queen and a small club winning in dummy and ruffed another diamond. The jack of hearts was cashed, another heart led to the board and at trick 12 the last club was led through East. South covered whichever trump East played and claimed her contract.

Just as we were about to congratulate the L. O. L. for perfectly executing a trump coup after the necessary trump reduction in her own hand, declarer exclaimed: "I have been waiting to make this play for more than eight years; in fact ever since reading the book 'Reese on Play.'

After all those years it had to happen against us!

Teenagers Injured In Halloween Blast

Only serious Halloween injuries reported in Greater Victoria occurred near Memorial Arena when an army explosive burned two teenagers.

Pte John Robert Meier, 17, PPCLI Work Point Barracks, suffered first and second-degree burns to the face and right arm but is in good condition at HMCS Naden Hospital.

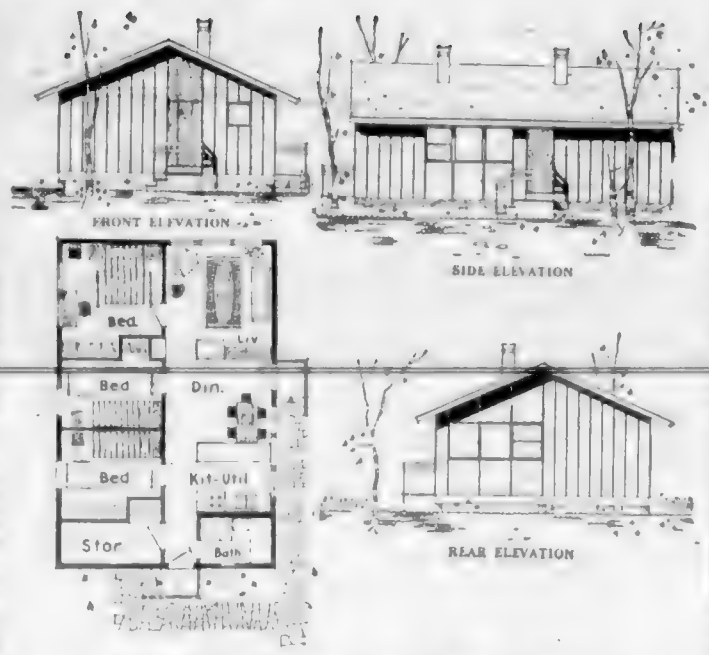
First-degree burns to the right hand were suffered by Ronald Matthews, 16, of [illegible] Terry, in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

A ground burst cartridge emptied of its powder and mass present, was found by police at the scene at the north end of the arena on Pembroke. It was believed someone had pointed some of its explosive on the [illegible]

Another boy, [illegible], was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital following a traffic accident, but she was released shortly.

Andrea Rose, 11, of [illegible] was hurt a short time after [illegible] Development Avenue to Wellington Court. [illegible] Cedar Hill Road.

Alvin Ramage, 11, of [illegible] Westmount Place, was treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for [illegible] burns caused by playing with firecrackers.



NHA Will Finance this $5,000 House

Intended for construction where municipal services such as sewer, water and electricity are not available, this design by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is an example of minimum requirements in construction for houses financed under National Housing Act. It is expected that the house can be built in outlying areas for about $5,000. Exterior dimensions of house are 36 ft. 1 in. by 24 ft. 4 in. House is built on piers or columns instead of a basement or running foundation, while other cost-saving devices include use of space heater and prefabricated chimneys. Working drawings for this house, known as Design 2000, are available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at minimum cost.

Millions of Homeless Dogs

Rabies Rife in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (NANA)—Mexican health authorities have begun a vast drive to eliminate rabies throughout the republic. A round-up of all "Callejeros" homeless dogs has been authorized by the secretary of health, Dr Ignacio Morones Prieto.

An average of 50 persons a day are bitten by the mad dogs that roam the city's streets. In the last six years a total of 76,692 persons were examined at the [illegible] anti-rabies centre with [illegible] of them having to get [illegible].

Under the new regulations made then one for every two people and that a large percentage of them are homeless. In mongrel strays will be rounded up by brigades of medical students, veterinary students and workers of the anti-rabies centre.

Many private citizens, societies for the protection of animals and women's organizations have [illegible] attacked the drive [illegible] as inhumane.

"The reactions of people when the painful series of anti-rabies [illegible] our medical teams try to capture [illegible] animals are unimaginable," said Dr Alfredo Curiel, chief veterinarian of the anti-rabies centre. "Some people go to great excesses. Some dog snatchers, sent after rabid dogs, have returned with severe injuries and even knife wounds. The public [illegible] must learn to understand that these [illegible] are necessary."

[illegible] meeting of the [illegible] will be held at the home of Mrs H Dunstedt, 540 Rithet Road, on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. Final arrangements for the rummage sale will be made.

Garbarators Spell Troubles in Tanks

Automatic garbage disposal units may be convenient, but they are unsuitable for septic tank areas in Saanich municipal engineer Neville Lite warned last night.

A number of Saanich residents have recently had the garbarators installed. They are fitted in a kitchen sink and grind up garbage, flushing it into the sewers or septic tanks with water.

"The extra rush of water through a septic tank system could just tip the balance and cause trouble," Mr Lite said. "The trouble can be corrected but it is quite often an expensive one to do."

An overflow [illegible] causes a health problem [illegible] and in the [illegible] water [illegible].

R. W. McClung

Funeral Tuesday

Funeral services for Robert Wesley McClung, husband of the late author and lecturer Nellie McClung, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in McCall Brothers funeral home with Rev. T. G. Griffiths and Rev. A. L. Avery officiating.

Interment will follow in the family plot at Royal Oak Burial Park.

Mr McClung died yesterday at a private hospital in Victoria. He was 87 years of age.

He came to Victoria in 1903 and was a former manager of the local branch of Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company.

Mrs. McClung, who died in September, 1951, was known across Canada as a champion of women's rights.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs H M Atkinson of Vancouver, three sons, Horace, of 1539 Wilmot Place, Paul, of Vancouver, and Mark, of Ottawa; nine grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

'LUIGI' AN IRISHMAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Character actor J. Carroll Naish usually is cast as a Latin in the movies and on TV because of his dark eyes and dark hair, but he's really an Irishman—an Irish-American.

Naish was born Carroll Patrick Joseph Sarsfield Naish and spent part of his youth in Limerick, Ireland. His mother's maiden name was Moran, and the Naish family home, built in 1210, still stands.

Please Give Old Toys For Needy

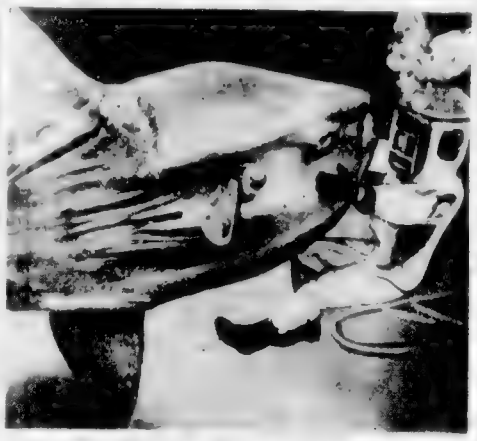
Club members have set up three "workshops" in the city to mend, repair and repaint toys ranging from rag dolls to wagons—all for the needy youngsters in Victoria this Christmas.

It has been arranged that anyone wishing to donate toys to the annual toy renovating program should drop them off at any Shell service station during November and the Cosmopolitan Club will do the rest.



Lazy Mola Eats by Hand

When the mola-mola, a 400-pound ocean sunfish of Miami, Fla., seaquarium, refused to eat, a diver was sent down to stuff food into its mouth. The diver found the mola a docile patient, but it liked the idea of spoon-feeding so well that it now shows no interest in getting its own food.

OFFER ACCEPTED

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mrs Marguerite Chapin, whose 12-year-old daughter Lauren plays Kathy in the "Father Knows Best" TV series, told Lauren she could choose whatever pet she wanted as her birthday present.

"This week," Mrs. Chapin said, "I received a letter from an overseas wild animal farm notifying me that the baby cheetah my daughter ordered will be about five months late in arriving."

THOUSANDS DO HONOR TO FALLEN

Second Dream Fell Short

HUGE ASSEMBLAGE Witnesses Dedication of Memorial Avenue to Commemorate B.C.'s War Heroes——

So read the headlines of the front page of The Daily Colonist of Dec. 4, 1921. Since then the years have passed and many now resident in Victoria may be unaware that this area does indeed possess a memorial avenue.

This was the second dream about Shelbourne Street that failed to come to full fruit, the dream which saw the long avenue enclosed from Mount Douglas to Rockland Avenue these trees serving as a living memorial to those who did not return from the Great War of 1914-1918. As those who live in the district know, while a good deal of it is treed the section between North Dairy Road and Cedar Hill Cross Road is still bare.

The idea of planting a Road of Remembrance to honor those departed in peace as well as those who fell in battle was first mooted in November, 1918. By March, 1919 there was afoot the movement that such an avenue should also embody a thanksgiving to all who served and to the relatives of those who did not return.

On Dec. 4, 1921, the first tree was planted. On that day more than 5,000 persons travelled out to the Mount Douglas end of the avenue to attend the ceremony at which Lieutenant-Governor Walter C. Nichol planted the first tree of remembrance. Cars were lined up for two miles, so great was the crowd that was said to be attracted for the planting off of exactly three hundred trees, one for each of those who had given their lives for the Empire.

During the next few years the planting of a tree on Memorial Avenue was a regular commencement for any prominent visitor. Among those was Prince Joseph Lubomirski of Poland who planted a tree on that occasion as there was a large number of the Polish Army in Ramo was a great lover of trees and also planted a tree but perhaps this was on a later visit. Sir Arthur Currie was another distinguished Canadian who added a tree to the avenue and there were many others.

In recent years a number of fine trees planted by prominent persons have died and attempts made to replace them but as the years go by the street loses more and more of its original appearance.

The great beauty of the more than two miles of the Memorial Avenue is the avenue of trees which were planted by and bore the names of those who had given their lives in the service of their country. Memorials of the Second World War have been planted on Shelbourne Street and on Cedar Hill Cross Road, but the Memorial Avenue of the First World War is the only one of its kind in Canada.

Let us now inquire why the trees have not been replaced in the last two miles of Shelbourne Street to complete the avenue. From the records we have been able to find it would appear that the original scheme was to plant trees on both sides of the road for the entire length of the avenue. Whether this was ever carried out we have been unable to discover but it would appear that it was not fully carried out.

Another point which has been brought to our attention is that the trees were not planted in the centre of the road but on the sides. Whether this was done to facilitate the passage of traffic or for some other reason we have been unable to discover.

It has also been suggested that in choosing these new trees it would be well to consider what can be done to maintain the beauty and continuity of the avenue.

If after full investigation it appears that parks have no choice but to be replaced eventually as has been suggested that it would be well to plant the present line of trees in such a way that a new row could be planted between the present rows so that eventually there would be a double row of trees on each side of the road.

During the years of the planting of trees on Memorial Avenue it was not only preserved but also much improved. A stand of native growth was planted and a small area was passed a memorial commemorating those people of 1867 a Canadian Army Day service was held there and the promises to be an annual event.

* * *

Now to consider the future of Memorial Avenue. What hopes there are that in planting the trees directly in memory of those who gave their lives that others might live in peace and freedom, the people of Victoria and Saanich, through the Greater Victoria Parks Board and Cedar Hill Cross Road Board, will see to it that the century-old avenue will soon be restored to its former beauty.

It was proposed that Memorial Avenue should consist of that portion of Shelbourne Street from Mount Douglas Park to Cedar Hill Cross Road. Be Victoria Star Bell Boy Unit Executive, motion to arouse responsible for the replanting.

Although the war-planted trees number only about 300, the avenue is considered a memorial to all those who gave their lives in the service of their country.

". . . long battle between trees and needs of expanding community . . . has forced cutting of many branches . . ."

PAGES OF THE PAST

High Excitement — Deep Tragedy

SATURDAY, Nov. 5, was a day of high excitement in Victoria 99 years ago. It was the day of a race and a knife. Hundreds lined the shore of the Inner Harbor, packed the wharves, found vantage points on James Bay Bridge and Victoria Bridge and set up a favorable lookout spot on Dead Man's Island. About two miles up the Gorge.

The contestants were those navy rose cutters rowed by sailors in Speedwell crewmen and ships officers in Rough and Ready and officers of the Marine Brigade in North Star. The courses were in harbors of James Bay.

A gun boomed at 1 p.m. for the start and the crews crouched to their oars, the British Colonist reported.

Speedwell took up and from the start although the brawny crew in North Star had been favored. When Speedwell rounded the Gut, a buoy, she was 70 yards ahead and met the rabble's jeers as she sped for home.

Off Dead Man's Island North Star's bowsman caught a crab and fouled a stroke and the crew lost a little ground recovering its oars. But that was all it lost.

At the buoy Rough and Ready and North Star struggled and their men splashed and sweated to get clear and lost many seconds in the fight. It was an exciting speedwell won handily covering the four miles in 30 minutes 42 seconds and was 300 yards ahead at the finish. Second place was claimed by the watchers Rough and Ready, not less than three minutes behind.

Navy officials may had to pay for the drinks for all of the participating athletes at the Cocktail that evening and settle a few matters in connection with the side.

* * *

But that same day tragedy shocked Victorians. Young Edmund S. Travers son of his wife and Mrs. Edmund Travers of Cloverdale [illegible] was missing. Aid a search discovered his capsized canoe at the mouth of the head near Cherry Bay.

[illegible] immediately undertook a search and was joined by [illegible] and boat. Assistance was also [illegible] Rough and Ready.

And in New Westminster there was consternation at reports of a piratical band of Indians pillaging some Navy Force Commodore cruising around the mouth of the Fraser.

About Nov. 1 these natives had murdered three other Indians. The crime stirred New Westminster's population, but [illegible] of the Royal Engineers stationed in the city, was heard to remark that sooner than have her children murdered by Indians [illegible] had them dressed.

THE DAY I FLEW to the MOON

By

JIM BISHOP

CHAPTER FIVE

IN SPACE, June 14, 1965—I slept. The last I remember was the conversation of Dr. Stroghold and the bride. They were discussing a day-night cycle. I gathered somewhat hazily, that the five of us must establish strict hours for sleep, certain hours for arising, and breakfasting and so forth, or else the bodily functions become sluggish.

Then I went off in my own space ship. It was a dreamless sleep. When I awakened my watch read 8:30 but there was no way of telling whether it was p.m. or a.m., diurnal or postmeridian. Bobbie was preparing food and she said, "You got in about five hours of sleep. The rest of us got a few."

Then it must be P.M. It required time to think. Where was I? What was I doing here? Morley sat facing me for a moment. He always looks tired and kind of sad. He told me that they lost contact with Cape Canaveral for a while then they picked it up again through a hole in the ionosphere.

Morley and Stroghold received orders regarding the use of the N-2 engines, but Morley could not tell me what they were. It is a matter of national security and I do not know whether they are using the big rocket engines for additional power or whether we are slowing down.

The system of navigation is another matter which is outside my ken. I assumed that after takeoff we would aim at the spot where the moon is expected to be when we get into its space area. This is not so. Zawadzki, who feeds excuses in the past few hours to keep his hands in the kitchen, work made a big letter S for me on a piece of paper. This is our course which seems odd.

The moon in this phase is 243,000 miles from Canaveral. According to Bonis figures, Terra-1 must travel about 292,000 miles to reach it.

* * *

I LOOKED out the window. The spaceland moved. Rather we had turned. It was now forward to the right about 30 degrees off our nose. The stars had the same steely brightness that they had when we were out of the sun's orbit. They appeared to be no closer. Far behind the earth sun, it was now the size of a man's head. The startling thing to me was that part of it was now dark so that it looked like a king-sized half moon.

The Pacific Ocean and the Asiatic continent were beautiful but could be disturbing. The sky was a much deeper blue than I would have thought. The continents from Singapore to Bering Straits was fairly even and looked like photo-perfect comfort. The eastern parts of North and South America were blurred to the back line of night.

"Would you like to look at the moon?" It was Dr. Stroghold. I turned away from the window. He led me to the pilot compartment. Morley and Zawadzki were not speaking. They sat before their chairs, eyes fixed studying the instrument panel now to the left, now the windows ahead, now—

Show him the moon, said the doctor to Morley. Stroghold said it with the eagerness of a boy about to display a new toy or a pet he has been trying. The pilot swung his chair. The left hand window turned black, pricked with light.

* * *

FOR A MOMENT, the sight I saw struck me into silence. Immediately in my path was a gigantic ball, bright orange, against the black. It was centered in the deep black—space the brightest thing I have ever seen. [illegible] a huge, lazy beauty filling a big segment of the sky. [illegible] and bright as [illegible] I could see [illegible] the moon.

"Are we in its orbit yet?" I said.

"No," the doctor said. He said to Bob, "How far are we?" Zawadzki had a chart clipped to a board beside his chair. He studied it. "At the end of the 9th hour, 8 p.m. Canaveral time, we had logged 226,250 miles." He picked up a pencil and scrawled along the edge of the sheet. "We should be in orbit in three hours. Less than three."

"This is the easiest phase," the doctor said. "The stone we threw into the sky is near the top of the parabola. On celestial flight, with no engines, we would be slowed down to nothing. Then we would drift into the moon's orbit and we would be sucked in faster and faster." He shrugged. "But Canaveral ordered us to use the engines."

"That's classified information," Morley snapped.

Stroghold apologized. "I forgot."

That answered a question for me. They had used the retarding jets to speed up the normal drift. The strange fact of it is that I cannot tell when the engines are on or off, except when we are in earth space. There the acceleration is so high that it nearly kills me. Out here there is no sound, no vibration.

I studied the moon until the eyes ached. It is an enormous [illegible] and sentimental [illegible]. I have seen it come up [illegible] orange on the Atlantic coast, I have seen it pale and rise, set like a cameo on the rim of the Pacific.

* * *

THE DOCTOR AND I went [illegible] "It is something [illegible]" he said. [illegible] Nobody will believe it," I said.

"Yes they will," the doctor said. "We have [illegible] about 11,000 feet of color film."

[illegible]

"The accounts. We have been making [illegible] shots and minutes [illegible]."

Bob and Bobbie sat with us [illegible] one was more [illegible] Zawadzki, [illegible] Zawadzki said [illegible]. We couldn't [illegible] the moon's [illegible] gravity.

"After I get back," Zawadzki said [illegible] I think I'll [illegible] my pensions."

"You're staying in the Air Force," Bobbie said.

The bridegroom studied her, half amused, half concerned.

"That's the first time you ever [illegible] me to do anything," he said. She looked at him with [illegible] "Because to education. Then you answered and said, 'I had to come. You're starting in the Air Force. Let Mr. Bishop do the writing.'"

The doctor laughed. "Once [illegible] established the proprietary interest she never [illegible]."

Zawadzki grabbed her and kissed [illegible]. Two of our food boxes slipped off [illegible]. She's my lady, he said, and my boss.

We settled away the next [illegible] sleeping [illegible] and get rolling. We [illegible] of a [illegible] and Bobbie had [illegible]. Then Sgt. [illegible] Clyde Morley and lost $.

Stroghold was in the pilot [illegible] and [illegible] down the aisle exulted [illegible] in the moon's orbit," he said. "We are [illegible]."

A fortnight [illegible] said elatedly. "Mars, you go? Mars! Mars, maybe." It was [illegible]. He [illegible] prepared [illegible] hours. He looked [illegible] and [illegible] he said.

Hair Problem? Wig Helps Edie

ADVICE TO MILADY

By LYDIA LANE

EDIE ADAMS
... don't grab those bangs!

HOLLYWOOD—Edie Adams and her husband, comic Ernie Kovacs, are neighbors of mine and one morning recently I had a pleasant encounter with Edie. She was wearing fetching short shorts that revealed a very nice figure and I made a mental note to suggest to my fellow-columnist that she exploit it.

"I need help on weight and hair today," Edie confessed, and as a result we had a very fine session.

"Even now I am on the plump side and I have been told over and over again that I should lose ten pounds. I'm determined to do it because I feel much better when I'm slim. I've found the best way to lose weight is to eat."

You know, I used to lose it because my mother was a terrible cook. She was a wonderful person but she couldn't even boil water. I'm determined that my husband shall not starve to death when I'm away, so I learned how to cook. Now I'm a good cook and I've lost weight."

NOT HUNGRY

Edie explained that she doesn't eat between meals. "When you snack you're not really hungry, you're just bored. Instead of eating three meals a day, I eat six small meals. That is a lot to fit in and still keep my figure, but I stay busy by fixing delicious fruits and unsweetened sweets. [illegible]

Of course that doesn't mean you can't have delicious spaghetti dishes and calories a bread and butter. But with eggs and cottage cheese, salads, fresh fruits and vegetables and lean meats, [illegible]

"It's necessary to work at equality between owning a house and running a home," she said. "I feel both are equally important and must be given equally well.

THE HEROIC PARTS played by volunteers from Western Canada since the first contingent of volunteers left to fight against the Boers in South Africa is a colorful saga. But there are other sparkling facets to the edifice of bravery and devotion reared by courageous men long before the bugle sounded from Africa. Unfortunately all of these incidents are not as well known as they deserve.

Bob Hallock Knows Needs of Emcee

By BERT BINNY

AWAY BACK in the early 1930s, I recall most vividly a recording entitled, "The Village Concert."

It used to be aired fairly frequently over radio, CFRN, in Edmonton.

"The Village Concert" poked all manner of fun, some of it none too gentle at the efforts to show efforts by stars of the day in small English boroughs. From experience I know it to be devastatingly accurate.

At these sessions the Vicar or Rector of the parish concerned almost inevitably assumed the role of the emcee. He may have done it as a duty or a right or a privilege as a resident. Who could tell? It didn't matter. The fact remains that with his rather austere appearance followed only by carefully distilled humor he was in every form of entertainment probably. Who of us can forget his efforts to show that "Murder will out" in time.

If the Vicar stole any thunder it was quite inadvertent and he would very gladly have been told of it. It was not his brand of thunder at all.

Nowadays, however, the emcee is an artist in his own right. Webster does not recognize 'emcee' at all and prefers Member of Congress to Master of Ceremonies as the interpretation of the letters, 'MC'.

Notwithstanding however, the emcee has evolved into a definite and individual part of the stage art.

Among his ancestors was "Mr Interlocutor" of the Minstrel show which goes clear back 130 years to 1843 when Daniel Emmett composer of "Dixie" started Ethiopian minstrelsy.

In 1951 the United States Air Force inaugurated an entertainment program which was called "Tops It Blue." This project has since been adopted by the Army, the Navy and the Marines with all services appearing in the Edmonton Show.

Competition is divided into categories, one of them for emcees. In 1955 one of the entrants in this classification was Bob Hallock, then a resident near Seattle and recently a great success as Chairman in the Vancouver Players presentation of Noel Coward's 'Blithe Spirit'.

Bob won the "Tops In Blue" contest at the base level at Portland Air Base where he was stationed. The northwest finals were held at Spokane and the western division finals at Sioux Falls in South Dakota.

At both Mr Hallock was a winner and he proceeded then to Sampson Air Base near Geneva in the State of New York for the "World Finals." And here he finished second.

For this outstanding performance he was awarded a bronze Pegasus, the Air Force equivalent and counterpart of the Oscar of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Bob's interest in the stage started when he was a student at Hugh Sloan High School in Portland.

With fellow student Dick Hall he formed a Pipe, Bass and Drum band of Kilties called Hall and Hallock. They were so successful that the two were soon in demand at meetings of civic groups and at night clubs.

Later Bob formed a trio with Ronald Garrison, who still entertains on the night club circuits and Flip Canale, an accomplished accordionist. This aggregation performed both during the "Tops In Blue" junkets and later.

Indeed, they were offered circuit bookings out of Seattle by the renowned MCA.

But Bob Hallock had already turned to TV. He was floor director at Portland's KPTV, the world's first UHF commercial outlet. He was also in charge of 'special service' at the Portland Air Base.

Later he was with KLEW-TV at Lewiston, Idaho, and came to Canada in 1956.

Bob is also an actor on the legitimate stage. He majored in dramatics at Lewis and Clark College in Portland whence he received his BA degree. In addition to college plays he appeared with the vigorous Portland Civic Theatre. Among the many well-known plays in which he has participated are "Our Town," "The Show Off," "The Male Animal," "The Winslow Boy," "The Silver Cord" and "Craig's Other Wife." Nor was Shakespeare neglected. With the Civic Theatre he played in "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

* * *

"Thus Says Hannah, assistant to Mrs. Patterson, in the Stage Door comedy, to which she refers as the 'story of my life'."

"A successful career in stock would suit me fine," Bob declares, "but I'm equally content to be free-lancing. But I'd like to be settled somewhere."

"Moreover," he adds, "an emcee must get to know just what the city of operation has to offer in the line of entertainment."

As Early as 6 A.M. Young Players Crowd the Ice

Victoria is a hockey town—and if you don't believe it there are some 500 boys from all parts of the Greater Victoria area who regularly get up in the middle of the night so they can be at the Memorial Arena by 6 a.m. for hockey training. But, warns Doug Fletcher of the Victoria Minor Hockey Association, there is a distinct possibility that only the youngsters who live in Victoria city will be able to play unless more ice time can be obtained. "Every day more boys come down to register but we just haven't the ice time," he said. "Maybe we'll have to do what New Westminster did — restrict it to city youngsters only." Another more humiliating feature of the insufficient amount of ice time available occurs when Victoria youngsters play a team from elsewhere in the province. In the main they are "hopelessly outclassed," said Mr. Fletcher.

On Island

No Gas Before 1962

Natural gas won't reach Vancouver Island [illegible] the B.C. mainland before 1962, W. C. Mennie, vice-president of B.C. Electric, said yesterday.

Extensive surveys had indicated an earlier target date of 1961 "point" practical, he said because of the [illegible] cost of installing the pipeline and [illegible] equipment.

"The problem is to develop a plan which would make such a gas line economic and bring the benefits of natural gas here at competitive rates," he said.

Although a proposed use of a flexible undersea gas line has not been abandoned, estimates of its cost "did not measure out encouragingly," he said.

The studies were a group effort on the part of the B.C. Electric, the Vancouver Island Gas Company, gas consultants and pipeline manufacturers.

Fish Make Day Perfect

Schools of fish were in yesterday when school was out for young fishermen. Standing before a Japanese lumber carrier at crowded Ogden Point docks is Bobby Jackson, 14, of 1190 Memorial Crescent with two of the many Alaska black cod he and the other boys caught—using such unlikely "bait" as cigaret filter tips. (Colonist photo.)

Forgotten Also Need Presents

The gifts, collected here by the Victoria branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association, will be distributed, individually wrapped, to the patients.

Donors are asked to leave new gifts such as candy, scarves, billfolds, cards, cosmetics, handkerchiefs and other items at the Victoria Collection Depot at 817A Fort Street before Dec. 1. Cash donations should be sent to the same address.

Halloween Practised In Reverse

And a happy Halloween to you, too, Jack Burgess said first thing yesterday morning to some unknown who had practised Halloween in reverse.

The windows of his men's wear store at 2201 Oak Bay Ave. [illegible] had been scraped up "and they made a dandy job of it," [illegible] when he left the store at 9 p.m. Friday.

"I came in at 9 a.m. today prepared for a big job of washing them but somebody had beat me to it," he said.

Mr. Burgess said he liked to think it was proof that "the kids these days aren't as bad as we think they are."

See Sputnik At 6:10 P.M.

Victoria satellite gazers will be able to see Sputnik III pass overhead today at 6.10 p.m. providing there are no clouds in the sky, the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory said yesterday.

DUNCAN—Membership of the Central Vancouver Island chapter of the Pacific Northwest Personnel Management Association is at a high of 20. It was announced following a first fall meeting here.

H. G. Winter, Youbou, was elected president.

The group meets once monthly at different Island points.

Extra [illegible] RCMP patrols and [illegible] escorts for several large-scale Halloween bonfires and [illegible] were credited.

Over 1,400 persons thronged the new Harewood community [illegible] for a huge bonfire and fireworks display. Another 1,200 flocked to the Civic Arena for a Halloween skating party.

Northfield and Lantzville communities put on their own individual halloween parties.

NANAIMO—The United Appeal campaign reached the half-way mark at the weekend and on Saturday had registered a total of $23,500 of a target of $50,000.

Although the campaign is officially concluded, donations continue to flow in.

Caution, Says Councillor Todd

Full Probe Urged Before Auditorium

A full investigation must be made into possibilities of a warned last night.

Coun. Harold Todd of Saanich Greater Victoria auditorium to make sure it will not become payer, seems to be about $4 a a long-time liability for the area, year," he said, "but a great deal of thought and research should be carried out before this idea is put to the rate payers.

The Winnipeg auditorium built during depression years, has proved a 26-year liability to the city," he said. It was financed by the federal, provincial and city governments at a cost of $1,250,000 and has so far lost $868,000.

"If the Winnipeg auditorium is typical then a substantial subsidy will have to be paid by the ratepayers of Greater Victoria," he said. "However conditions differ from area to area."

Police Only Victims Of Halloween Pranks

CAMPBELL RIVER—A police station window was about the only casualty of note here during an exceptionally quiet Halloween patrolled by village work crews and volunteers.

But a rock was tossed through the RCMP station window while all officers, including the crew of patrol boat Masset, were on duty guarding against Halloween mischief.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann: I've been going with a man for over a year and I'm very much in love with him. He's not perfect, but he's completely satisfactory to me.

We go everywhere together and enjoy each other's company. It's so nice not to be lonely. But being a woman, I'd like to plan on a secure future.

Should I break off with him and do without his companionship in hopes of meeting someone else? Or shall I live my life a day at a time, be grateful for the happiness he gives me and pray one day he'll change his mind? — M.L.B.

Forget About Future

I can't make this decision for you because I don't know what you want out of life. If you're content to settle for day-to-day contentment, then recognize the relationship for what it is and forget about the future.

A woman who is afraid of loneliness and is satisfied to soak up the sunshine of the moment with no thought for tomorrow's clouds should at least be honest with herself. It saves wear and tear on the emotional machinery later.

One thing is certain. This man will not marry you as things stand. He doesn't have to. There's always the chance that if you "break off with him" he'll become lonely and accept your terms when he finds he has to choose between losing you or paying the price of alimony. There are darned few catches. Good luck.

Dear Ann: I'm a girl of 18 and my boy friend is almost 20. He has a good job but pays his folks board and room. Also he is going to night school and this costs something.

The only thing wrong with him is he doesn't own a car. I don't think he should have a complex over not having one, but it's embarrassing to go everywhere by bus. I always become car sick and refuse to go anywhere with him. To tell you the truth I'm sick of it.

When I mention this to him, he doesn't say much except to tell me that maybe I'll get a new boy friend. I'm very much in love with him. What do you think? — Miss B.B.H.

No Hint Needed

Dear Marybelle: He doesn't need a hint. He needs money.

If he's as special as you say you should be satisfied to go to the ball park occasionally or paid for a shoe leather. Get off his back!

P.S. He sounds like a bright ambitious kid who will have a Cadillac eventually. Have you thought of this, Stupid?

Dear Ann: Ten years ago my husband took up with a married woman. When the romance got going full blast she threw her own husband out of the house and that's the last anyone ever heard of him.

Now this scarlet wench is a divorcee with four children. My man has been married also and has two of his own. He loves me, but I'm not sure how much. He's told me frankly that he doesn't want the responsibility of my children. The problem is NOT financial. I have money.

Now this scarlet wench is reverting to herself as the widow of the late Mr. X. I've read the papers every day and never once come across a line of his death in the obituary column.

How can I find out if this man really died? I'd like to let my husband know what type of woman he's been running with all these years. — R.C.

* * *

Dear R.C.: You'll have one gingerpeachy time getting the facts on this. The man could have died in another city. I think you'd be concerned with the moral aspect of what's been going on under your nose rather than with what has happened to another woman's husband.

Designer Just Doesn't Care

Why Consider Men?

NEW YORK (AP) — Yves Saint Laurent, 22-year-old successor to the late Christian Dior, doesn't care whether men like his clothes or not, just so women wear them.

"Consider men? Never! Why should I?" asked the Parisian designer in New York for the opening of his American spring collection.

Reminded of the male protest [illegible] the [illegible] he [illegible] feminized youth shape and remarked:

MORE INTRIGUING

"Sometimes a fat [illegible] comes to me figure is more interesting than the [illegible] I think a woman should look feminine, but not too much [illegible]."

[illegible] with a number of full skirts in both day time and evening fashions.

DIOR'S MANTLE

Saint-Laurent inherited the mantle of Dior about a year ago and his rise since has been dizzy. He started by carving on the tradition of his master, acknowledged head of the couture of world fashion.

But when asked whether he found it hard to live up to the [illegible]

"Not at all."

NO DOUBTS

For four years since the age of 18 Saint-Laurent has been designing for the house of Dior and he indicates that he has no doubts of [illegible] ability to carry on His New York appearance wound up a two-week tour of the United States, during which he visited Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago. He sails for Paris on May.

Fame and fortune have made no difference in the young man's life, he insists. He has bought no sports cars, diamonds or fancy clothes. He has wasted neither time nor money on wine, women or song. He has no hobbies, no sports, no interests [illegible]

"That is my pleasure to design," says he. "I am happy only when I am creating. I have no time for other things."

High-Rising Empire Waist Accents Pliant Sheath by Dobson

PROMINENT DESIGNER

This is the year of the new EMPIRE, the elegant high curved waist! In Printed Pattern A888 Isabel Dobson creates a pliant, slender shape with the adv[illegible] waist defined by seaming and a bow just under the bosom. Rounded neckline, sleeves to the elbow are the only other details on this flawlessly cut dress that's smart and simple by day—dramatically figure-revealing a. night. Wool jersey, plain or vividly printed, soufflé-light mohair, tweed cotton, linen are naturals for casual wear. For holiday parties and theatre-going, the designer suggests brocade or gleaming satin.

Printed Pattern A888 is available in Misses' sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 16 requires 3 yards 39-inch fabric.

Church Aisle, Bowling Alley Linked

Game Ancient but Still Popular

That 'Perfect Score' Target for Million Bowlers

★ ★ ★

Dazzling Silks, Satins Flashy But Comfortable

By ANNE SMELLIE

A bowling alley is a far cry from a church aisle, yet the sport now enjoyed by millions in North America may have had its origin as a primitive religious rite.

Fivepin bowling is a fancy affair as Mrs. Gladys Girard keeps score while her pal, Ruth Anderson of Gerry Girard's team, bowls. Seated beside Mrs. Girard are Miss Dorothy Hong and Mrs. Donna Langstaff. Mrs. Langstaff from Bellevue Dist., was the ladies' singles champ there last year averaging a 234 score out of 30 games.

'You Never Go Back'

Mother of two, Mrs. Dorothy Bennett throws a strike right at you. Mrs. Bennett, who lives on Burnside Road West and has a daughter, Terry Lyn, 5, and son, Gordon, 2, has been bowling for 11 years.

Keen interest is shown here as the 20-team league of women's tenpin bowlers who meet Monday nights at Gibson's Bowladrome gather for the photographer.

This trio of attractive bowlers average 12 years of bowling among them and are teammates in an "old bowlers" league that meets Monday nights. From left to right they are Mrs. Grace Elves, Mrs. Lorna Pollock and Mrs. Tess Kamman.

Now We've Found Popless Popcorn!

The National Geographic Society reports that the steel type leaves little or no hull when cooked. The silicone it moves doesn't could be the move that's long with buttered

Unfortunately there's a new bear the success and isn't actually popcorn.

It's made from soybean and expands only 17 times it original size while popped doesn't purchase small ... For this reason the product will not be used commercially ...

Insurance is believed to have existed among the Babylonians as early as 2,000 B.C.

Lehar's Farming Nephew Keeps Waltz Music Alive

SWEETSBURG, Que. (CP) —In a 150-year-old farmhouse near here, the nephew of Hungarian composer Franz Lehar is working to keep his uncle's name and works alive.

"My uncle was never interested in business," said Francis Lehar in an interview. "He always had enough money for his own needs, so the copyrights and manuscripts got into disorder."

Known as "The Waltz King," Franz Lehar was born in Hungary in 1870 and died in 1948. During his best years, from 1902 to 1910, he composed more than a dozen operettas, the most famous perhaps his gay Merry Widow.

When he died, at his request his sister's son, Francis Paphazy, took the Lehar name. With it came the business headaches which occupy a great part of Francis Lehar's day.

"I find that most of my time is being taken up by my uncle's affairs," said Mr. Lehar. "I am trying to keep his music alive.

"I have formed a company and work from my home seeing that all royalties are paid while also hiring out music and scores to companies."

Mr. Lehar came to North America with his wife in 1948. He had been secretary to the Hungarian legation at Vichy during the Second World War and decided not to return because of the Communist regime in Hungary.

Of his uncle, he says:

"He used to say that a true waltz holds all the unspoken love of a man and a girl. It is a simple love-poem in music. Each note must be inevitable."

Pensioner Offers Aid To Society

An old age pensioner, who initiated moves to construct an arboretum in Saanich some 30 years ago, has offered to contribute from his pension to the efforts of the present Saanich Arboretum Society.

Edward Hammond of Sidney made the offer in a letter to Dr. Adam Szczawinski, provincial botanist, who is a member of the society.

"I am interested and rather proud that the site I suggested—land at Elk and Beaver Lakes—is the site the Arboretum Society hopes to obtain," he said.

The society will meet Saanich parks committee Tuesday to ask permission to build a rhododendron and azealea garden in Playfair Park as a beginning for the arboretum.

Weather-Changer's Recipe:

Take Two H-Bombs, Simmer Sea to Steam

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Man would be a fool to fool around with the weather.

If he could change the weather and did, he might very well wish he hadn't.

That, at least, is the view of one prominent weather scientist, Dr. Harry Wexler.

Wexler is director of meteorological research of the U.S. Weather Bureau. He also is chief scientist of the U.S. Antarctic research program.

Wexler says current proposals for large scale weather modification "are either impractical or likely to produce cures that are worse than the ailment."

One proposal for changing the earth's heat balance and thus alter its weather is to blacken the Arctic ice pack and certain deserts with a thin film of carbon.

This, theoretically, would result in greater absorption and less loss of heat received from the sun. To accomplish anything with this method it would take, Wexler estimates, 1,500,000,000 tons of carbon for the Arctic and 500,000,000 tons for the deserts.

An alternative would be to generate thick fogs of ice crystals which would reduce radiation of solar energy back into space. Wexler's recipe for cooking up such a fog is as follows:

Take 10 really "clean"—that is non-radioactive — hydrogen bombs each equal in energy to 10,000,000 tons of TNT. Explode them at just the right depth in the Arctic Ocean to produce the right amout of steam, which thereupon gushes into the atmosphere and condenses into [illegible] forming the required ice fog to warm the Arctic.

But would that be good? No, Wexler says.

This would increase the size of existing glaciers and cause new ones to form, "creating a new ice age" endangering the life of cities and communities

Saanich Rally On Tuesday

Amalgamation and a plan to force development into small areas of Saanich will be discussed by Reeve George Chatterton at a public meeting in the Royal Oak Women's Institute hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The meeting was originally arranged by the Elk Lake Ratepayers' Association to hear Reeve Chatterton's views on the development plan. But the Deutsch amalgamation report was released since the date set, and now, notices advertising the meeting in Royal Oak stress the question of amalgamation.

'95 Per Cent Accurate'

Scientist Claims Cancer-Spotter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dr. Jack Makari of Plainfield, N.J., says that a blood test he has developed has been 95 per cent accurate in diagnosing carcinoma, the most prevalent form of cancer.

He told the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association Thursday that his test had been tried by University of Belfast researchers with similar results.

Other cancer researchers, asked by reporters for comment, said this and other developments reported by Dr. Makari need further exploration before a definite evaluation.

Dr. Makari said the test is based on a method previously used in science to detect such things as tuberculosis and allergies, but has never, to his knowledge, been used to diagnose cancer.

He told reporters at a press conference that the method could only be used at special laboratory centres.

He also reported development of a skin test which he said offered promise of detecting the possible presence of cancer of any type in apparently well people.

Sweden's imports and exports dropped 6 per cent during the first eight months of 1958.

Committees Set Up

New Peace Society Chooses Directors

The Peace by Peaceful Means Society has elected 23 directors and organized four committees.

Directors are Ed Haw, Frank Steggles, Molly Phillips, Mrs. A. B. Boon, William Hooson, Mrs. Bert Noel, Rev. N. L. Hughes, Rev. E. J. Staley, Mrs. Bernice Packford, Helen Brunell, Mrs. May Campbell, Harvey Mickelson, Richard Broughton, J. H. Ford, Mrs. Jean Bain, Mrs. Dorcas Blair, Larry Tickner, Mrs. Dorothy Penney, Glen Hamilton, Roy Temple, Nora Couchman, Mrs. Rosemary Hamilton and George Wood.

Committees were organized to study implications of nuclear warfare, Canada's role in promoting peace, causes of war and methods of promoting international understanding and cultural exchanges.

The president will be elected at a board of directors meeting on Nov. 12.

Persons wanting further information on the society should call Mrs. Penney at EV 3-8573.

63 Candles Blown Out By Veteran

Sixty-three candles on a huge birthday cake decorated in Halloween motifs were blown out recently by veteran Mr. F. Sutherland, guest-of-honor at a recent party in the pavilion lounge of Veterans' Hospital.

The assembled company of patients and friends sang their favorite songs of First and Second World Wars, accompanied by Andy Anderson at the piano.

George Barton and Charlie Wilkins, masters of ceremonies, conducted a beauty contest, won by H. Parker and R. Whitehead, and a bean-guessing contest, won by W. Simpson.

"NICE PLACE TO LIVE, TWO PLACES TO RENT"

Don't believe it if your friends tell you there are no bargains. $110 monthly income, plus a lovely 2-bedroom, ground-floor suite for yourself, included with the sale of this fine solid, 3-suite home. Located in a good, gracious revenue district. The 2 upper suites are presently rented and are designed so as to ensure continued rental. This is a real investment. For further details of this bargain at $16,000

"SUITE AND LOW"

Here's a 12-year-old, stucco bungalow with basement suite which pays half the mortgage and all the taxes. There are 2 good bedrooms on the main floor, Acetex tiles in the kitchen, an excellent fireplace in the living room and a view window in the dining room. The furnace needs replacing. I would suggest a new Oil-O-Matic furnace (financed on monthly payments), which would add greatly to the market value of this property. Full price ..... $9950 with $2,000 down and balance at $78 monthly. The basement suite is now rented at $50 to a reliable tenant.

"HOMEY BUNGALOW"

Leo Rogers

Here is an immaculate, two large bedroom bungalow with no steps, glass dash stucco; on a quiet street, close to town; for people who are house-proud. Owners are moving to Nanaimo and are sacrificing for quick sale at the low full price of ..... $7950 with $2,000 down. If you are looking for this type of home (one-year-old, new oil range included), contact me at once for this excellent buy.
